AFC01QON – SEPTEMBER UPDATE

Mr Locke: I would say that no matters have yet gone through to an ombudsman or an adjudicator for a determination. There are matters that will have resolved between the parties. In many cases with travel insurance, pandemic is excluded. For most travel insurance policies, people are not covered. Where they are coming to us, we're able to quickly have a look at the policy and explain the exclusions in respect of that. In most policies that is actually pretty clear. But it hasn't stopped people coming to us in the first instance. I'm happy to take on notice a more detailed response to the question that you raised, Chair, but I know that we have not had any matters that have yet worked through to an ombudsman or an adjudicator for a determination.

CHAIR: What I might put on effective notice is that if you could, perhaps by the end of next month and then for every month for the following six months, just give us an update on basic data around that, that would be very useful. We have asked similar things of APRA related to banking—the banks have done it for APRA, but we will get that data, as well as for other financial institutions like the banks, for regular updates. That would be helpful, in terms of matters resolved and also the method of resolution over the next little while.

Mr Locke: I'd be very happy to do that.

1 January 2020 to 30 September 2020 Report

COVID-19-related travel insurance complaints as of 30 September 2020

Between 1 January 2020 and 30 September 2020, AFCA received 2,954 travel insurance complaints relating to COVID-19. A total of 77% (1,893) of these complaints have so far been resolved with approximately $1,667,180.55 in compensation obtained by consumers.

In September specifically (1 September-30 September), AFCA received a total of 294 new travel insurance complaints (148 fewer than last month) and of these 63 have so far resolved.

The total number of COVID-19 travel insurance complaints resolved for the month of September was 432.

Complaint insights

Trends remain similar to those of previous months, including:

- Travel insurance complaint volumes received continued to decline in September (by a third – 33%) from August to September.
- The first decision relating to ‘natural disaster’ (where undefined by the policy) has been issued, which has been determined in the complainant’s favour.
- Claim declines have moved more towards policy exclusions (for instance pandemic/epidemic), and where insurers say consumers have not established a valid claim.
- There is discussion about ‘known event’ dates and what knowledge consumers had about COVID-19 at the time they entered into their travel insurance contract.
- Changes to travel plans.
- Most denial-of-claims matters are from people seeking advice from the insurer whether to cancel trip/flights and were unhappy with the response.

- Claims insurers didn't warn of possible pandemic exclusions at policy inception or started the pandemic date earlier than WHO declared date.
- Refunds of premiums following cancellation of travel.
