

To whom it may Concern

I whole heartedly support wind farms. This kind of technology is the future or at least part of the future of energy production in this country. It keeps many Australians employed and produces clean power cost effectively (or so the math that I have seen indicates).

Finally If we do not keep investing in new technology / technologies we cant ever expect to see any new or better ways of power production or doing anything else for that matter. If we don't, won't or can't do it (invest and develop new technology) chances are no one else will either.

Thank you for your consideration in advance
