

Scientists are increasingly certain that extreme weather events are being exacerbated by global warming, even at this early stage of global warming induced climate change.

Imagine how bad these effects are going to be with a 4degree or worse global warming increase, as forecast for later this century.

At the year 2100, do you want to be looked back upon as a voice for climate sanity, or as just another business-as-usual contributor to corporate climate madness?

Lester Irving