

Climate change is no longer a debate. We exacerbate it by an economy based on fossil fuels. A change to a steady state economy is not even considered, and by all accounts it will be both too late and too expensive if we don't start and accelerate such a change NOW.

Millions of people will die. Hundreds of thousands already do in Africa. Asia is next.

Prognoses state 'by the year 2100/ 2050/ ... the temperature will be.. or CO2 in the air will be.. What is less obvious is that these changes are gradual and already happening, at a great human and economic cost.

Individuals in companies that are raping the earth WILL have the funds for pleasant lives for them and their children in the last liveable places on earth. It is the rest of us, including government administrations that will become irrelevant and gradually or suddenly DEAD.

So the time for action is NOW OR NEVER. Do what you are paid for.

Angela Lindstad