

Yes I whole heartedly agree that Australia needs to prepare for some really shocking Weather scares in the near future and beyond and the more I hear and look at all the natural disasters that happen in this country we are so conditioned by all this to accept that this should be taken as NORMAL? Fires/Droughts/ Huge Hail/Electrical Storms / Increasing Earthquakes and Cyclones/Tornadoes that Asteroid Thingy may alleviate the boredom factor for the kids? I mean all this is so depressing! and also Boring!! and did anyone ever think of planting tree plantations with trees that basically don't burn? or what about using seawater for firefighting purposes? and where does Australia go with all of this? have they grown up enough to make things happen yet or do they have to be dragged to the Table to sign off on the new way while the Country continues to get smashed by the forces of Nature? Carry on Greens nice ideas about Nature but if Australia needs to learn the hard lessons from Nature than I guess that's how the majority may want to go? I won't be getting to emotionally caught up in all this as I don't have great expectations for the Intelligence of Australia to shine through all this as %50 of Australia is being medicated with that Flouride Filth.Sad? that wouldn't be the half of it.

Steven Stewart