

As residents of a very small beautiful village in rural Nova Scotia Canada we were devastated when wind turbines were erected, without our consent or any form of input. Our Municipal Council (none of whom live in the area) made an agreement with the proponents to install these ugly, noisy turbines. They appear as a blight on an otherwise pristine landscape. Our homes are now unsellable.....noisy.....and our surroundings are ugly.... How can governments allow this?

Moya and Dermot Murphy,