

Senate Inquiry into Emergency Communications

SBS Answers

1. What do you currently see as the role of SBS in emergency warning situations?

SBS response

SBS's television services are broadcast to a national audience. SBS will broadcast emergency warnings verbatim on its television services – in the form of on-screen crawls or full screen graphics, in English – in the event of national or state-wide emergencies only.

SBS's radio services cater to local audiences in Sydney (including Canberra and Wollongong) and Melbourne; and otherwise to a national (though limited in terms of coverage) audience. SBS has limited capacity to break into these services to broadcast emergency warnings given the logistics of its radio schedule (with a different language program broadcast each hour). SBS considers that it has an important role to play in the pre-education of multilingual audiences, especially new arrivals, about emergency processes in Australia, through information on its online services (see more detail in response to question 3 below) and community service announcements on its radio services.

SBS's news services – television and radio – may also broadcast information about emergencies as breaking news. Subject to SBS's editorial discretion, information may be presented: on SBS's television services – as a live read by a news presenter, or as a graphic; on SBS Radio – as a live read by a broadcaster in English, or in-language for live-to-air programs.

2. Can you currently provide on-screen “crawls” warning on SBS TV channels (all or only on SBS ONE)?

SBS response

SBS can provide on-screen crawls of emergency warnings on all of its television channels (currently SBS ONE (SD and HD channels) and SBS TWO (SD channel)).

(SD – Standard Definition; HD – High Definition)

3. What role does the SBS website currently play in the provision of emergency warnings?

SBS response

SBS's ability to develop content for its website is affected by the limited resources available to it for its online services. Currently SBS does not provide information about emergency warnings on its website. SBS is looking into developing information pages for its online community language services, such as the Chinese Virtual Community Centre and the SBS Radio language program websites. In the short term, SBS can develop information in English. Subject to the availability of resources, emergency information could also be provided in-language – as text and audio.

4. Senator Boyce: Presumably this is being driven by the proportion of non-English speaking people in a particular community. How many other communities are there out there that should have similar, in SBS's view?

Mr James: I would suggest it is probably in excess of 100, but I would have to take that on notice.

Senator Boyce: If you could, that would be good. Thank you.

SBS response

A list of 'Urban Centres / Localities' (ABS, 2006 Census). A UC/L 'is generally defined as a population cluster of 1,000 or more people' (ABS).

Locations served by SBS Radio are indicated in bold with the frequency indicated.

All other locations are not served by an SBS Radio transmitter. Please note that there are around 71 locations with populations of less than 1,000 that currently have access to an SBS transmission service (self-help service).
