

Dear Sir,

I wish to state that we enthusiastically support the development of renewable energy options in this country. And we are not just talking about it. We have 10kw of solar panels on our hotel in the Snowy Mountains and 5kw of solar panels on our residential property. Additionally we have invested in the Hepburn community wind farm.

From my reading it seems that wind farms are a very economically efficient power source and I understand that there are studies that show there are no health problems from living near one. The Hepburn wind farm is projected to supply power to more than 2000 homes - it is these sort of initiatives that are needed to reduce Australia's dependence on fossil fuels.

The parliament should be spending its time more productively - doing something about climate change for example.

Yours sincerely
