

Submission:

Dear Senator, I am in broad agreement with your concern that there may be some adverse impacts to wind farms. This is of course true of many initiatives and plans. However, I feel that it is – or at least appears to be – an attempt to prevent Australia from actively taking steps to transition into a less carbon-hungry economy.

As such, I feel that whatever the ‘costs’ of wind farms, they should be borne. This is all well, you may point out, as I am not the one who will have a turbine in my backyard. However, I would gladly accept the inconvenience – if I may call it that – in the knowledge that it is for the greater good.

My refusal to acknowledge the ‘bad’ side of wind farms perhaps makes me an unsuitable policymaker, or politician. And that is where you come into the situation.

Please Senator, do the right thing by Australia.

Yours Sincerely,

Edward Fernandez
