

It is hard to motivate a child that thinks their school is no good. The school might be listed 10th, 20th or last. If the student thinks this makes it a dud school you have lost them as a learner. And if by chance they are the last school then you are going to lose any motivated learner as the parents withdraw their child to put them in a better school. The unmotivated parents who do not care about school will stay at the school but this becomes an increasingly tough school for the teachers because they have no parent support and no culture of engagement from the home.
