

It is now imperative that elected politicians recognize and accept their moral obligation to act on behalf of the citizens who elected them and on behalf of the future of humanity.

They must now admit to the reality of global warming and move immediately to alleviate its worst consequences, meaningfully.

To do less is a crime against those who elected them, against all humanity, and against the planet on which we rely for our present and future existence.

The future will not be forgiving!!!

Kerry Johnson