

To whom it may concern,

I strongly believe that the current process which can restrict a midwife from practicing outside a hospital before a complaint is even investigated is unjust.

Our first child was born in a hospital and our second was born at home under the care of a midwife. I found that the professionalism of the care provided by the midwife far excelled what was provided for by the hospital not only leading up to the birth but after it as well.

Simple things like checking whether our first baby had tongue tie or not were not carried out by the hospital which seemed to be focused entirely on getting the baby out of the mother and then getting us out of there as quickly as possible.

Yours Sincerely,
Mark Oakley
