

Coming Home to Truth

by

Judith Roseboom

This 76-page booklet outlines Judith's experience as a pregnant teenager and her treatment in an unmarried mothers home, which resulted in her separation from her daughter, born on Judith's seventeenth birthday. As a result of telling her story, Judith received a written apology for the way in which she was treated and was instrumental in bringing about the apology from the Western Australian government to those whose lives had been adversely affected by past adoption policies and practices. Judith has written her story to help others in similar situations and to share what she has learned from her experience.
