

I read with dismay further amendments to legislation that are dangerous to ordinary citizens at work or socialising.

To make it an offence to merely offend someone will bring about lots of letigious claims which will clog our courts.

It will stifle our every day way of life as people will be afraid they will get sued.

To be considered guilty and have to prove innocence is another huge change to our existing system.

I oppose these amendments.

Terry Udy