

Well all I would like to say is thank you for your email, it was great to see that it was read, I wish I could add more to so this is what I hoping it will do, yes the nuns and priest forced me to adopt and being an orphan and no one to help me it was all I could do, but I am concerned that the child in question it has made her think very low of me and doesn't understand why, also at the time I didn't know I was suffering from post traumatic distress disorder and dissociative identity disorder , had taken on many different personalities to live, and it has only being in the last ten years that this has being addressed. I am concerned for the lack of awareness and help which is not given to the people who adopted without parents around or help to guide them, and at the time I was very young, I know in today's world 17 is not young but because of my orphanage life I was a very young for my age, and not seeing the world till I was 11 years of age, this made me a person who was looked at as if being abnormal because of my child like state, my different personalities are still their due to my growing up, as for the forced adoption I just did as I was told, but at the same time didn't know I was have a baby. The care and treatment I got being pregnant at the time I was made to feel like a very bad person. I just would like to add that to my submission 261, as I just would like the children of those people to stop making us feel we are less human.

Thank you
