

Joint Select Committee on Cyber-Safety

Chair: Senator Catryna Bilyk
Deputy Chair: Mr Alex Hawke MP

Seniors can be as cyber-savvy as anyone

The Parliament's Cyber-Safety Committee will discuss why vulnerability to cyber-risks may have less to do with age and more to do with experience at the next public hearing of its inquiry into Cybersafety for Senior Australians in Canberra on 27 June.

The Department of Broadband, Communications and the Digital Economy has told the committee that the susceptibility of an individual to a specific online risk is related less to the individual's age than to their behaviour when confronted with the risk.

Research indicates that those seniors who are regular users of the internet are no less confident in their abilities to protect themselves online than users in other age groups.

However statistics show seniors are overrepresented in the percentage of Australians who are either light or non-users of the internet, meaning seniors as a group may be less likely to have the knowledge and confidence to deal with those risks.

Committee Chair Senator Catryna Bilyk said it is vital that everyone online has the knowledge and skills to be able to protect themselves from cyber-risks.

"The committee is looking forward to hearing about the role that the Department of Broadband, Communications and the Digital Economy is playing in this regard," Senator Bilyk said.

The Department will discuss its work in supporting consumer information and research, and collaborating with industry to encourage solutions to consumer cybersafety and security issues.

Senator Bilyk also noted that a public survey initiated by the Committee has attracted significant interest and is still open. "I encourage senior Australians to complete the survey, either online or in hardcopy which can be posted or faxed to the Committee. The survey takes about ten minutes and is anonymous" Senator Bilyk said. The survey can be accessed at:
