

Dear Sir or Madam,

Please excuse the haste of this e-mail, but I feel I must protest about the Environment and Heritage Amendment Bill (No. 1) 2006 as it stands in its current form. It seems the balance has been set far too much in favour of sectional interests rather than the environment itself. With an election already looming, why is this legislation being rushed through? Is it to ensure the boards are cleared by a fait accompli? Putting important decisions like this solely into the hands of the relevant minister seems a retrograde step, please reconsider this approach as it will not deliver sustainable outcomes.

Yours sincerely, Lewis Morley
