NOTICE OF MOTION

16 October 2017

I give notice that on the next day of sitting I shall move that the Senate:

1. Notes:

- a. The Garvan Institute for Medical Research is conducting ground-breaking work on cancer, including cancer genomics, which is proving an important approach for rare and high mortality cancers;
- b. The Garvan Institute for Medical Research has limited access to supercomputers to process big data for precision cancer research, and so has teamed up with the Vodafone Foundation to create a new app, DreamLab, to help it overcome this obstacle;
- c. The DreamLab app pulls together the processing power of users' smartphones at night and other times the phone sit idle to give Garvan free access to a supercomputer resource;
- d. The DreamLab app has been available on Android phones since launching last year and, on October 23, the app will also be available on iPhone;
- e. So far, more than 100,000 Australians have downloaded the application on Android phones, which Garvan says has helped it fast-track the rate of its cancer research by 50 per cent; and
- f. Garvan hopes to encourage 1 million people to download the app, to help it fast-track important cancer research.

2. Calls on all Senators:

- a. To download the DreamLab app on October 23 and do their part to help propel Garvan's cancer research capabilities.
