1	Cameron	PC	National Competition Policy	Senator CAMERON: Seeing that this is your last estimates appearance and you are going to be there until December, I might try and give you a bit of homework. I will go through these questions and will put them on notice. National Competition Policy led to many changes in the way state and federal governments deliver services. In hindsight, were there any areas where you think the changes were poorly conceived or implemented, or would you describe competition policy as an unmitigated success story? I have only got a very short time so I will go through the range of questions. Mr Banks: I could give you a one-sentence quick response to that, and that is that we did not in fact find that everything that NCP achieved was an unmitigated success. There were some problems along the way, including in areas of contracting out and so on, which are documented in a report from 2005. But I will get back in more detail.	p. 109, Wednesday 17 October 2012	12/12/2012	7/2/2013
2	Cameron	PC	Vocational Education and Training System	Senator CAMERON: ...While the textbook conditions of perfect competition are rarely met, what percentage of the Australian economy would you describe as competitive and what percentage do you think is dominated by firms with significant market power? What should governments do about firms with that market power? You did a study into the vocational education and training system. Liberal-National governments in Victoria, Queensland and Western Australia have undertaken what I describe as a form of economic	p. 110, Wednesday 17 October 2012	14/02/2013 (correction rec'd 12/03/2013)	28/02/2013 (correction tabled 16/05/2013)

				vandalism with an assault on productivity through cuts to the TAFE system and social advancement for people. Do you think that the reduction of hundreds of millions of dollars of public funding to the TAFE system will allow the TAFE system to continue to contribute to increased productivity in the nation? Mr Banks: That sounds like a slightly loaded question, but we can probably respond to it in the context of the work we did on looking at the gains from VET reform more recently, including the education— Senator CAMERON: That is why I am asking. I have had a look at that report and you do indicate the importance of the VET system to productivity, social cohesion and a range of other issues. If hundreds of millions of dollars have been pulled out of that system, I would like to know what the Productivity Commission thinks that will do to productivity and social cohesion. Mr Woods: I can certainly confirm the first bit, because it is one of my inquiries, but we have not studied the consequence of the actions of the state governments. We will get back to you. Senator CAMERON: Thanks.
3	Bushby	AOFM	$9 Billion New Financing Requirement	Senator BUSHBY: ... In terms of the $9 billion new financing requirement that you referred to earlier, I understand that the AOFM is not responsible for detailing why that finance is required. Can you detail how this figure has varied between financial years? That is, going back to 2009-10, what was the forecast for the 2012-13 financial requirement, and again in 2010-11 and again in 2011-12? How has that changed over the forecasts? Mr Bath: For the 2011-12 year? Senator BUSHBY: For the 2012-13 year. Mr Bath: I do not know that I have each year's projection for financing tasks in front of me. I think I would have to take that on notice. Senator BUSHBY: No indication?	pp 116-117, Wednesday 17 October 2012	13/02/2013	28/02/2013

				Mr Bath: For the 2012-13 financial year, I do not think we have the planned financing task all the way back to 2009-10. Senator BUSHBY: Do you have that information for the 2011-12 year, looking back to the forecast for that year? Mr Bath: We might. I do not know if we have it on us at the moment. Senator Wong: Just take it on notice. Mr Bath: I think we will have to take it on notice. Senator BUSHBY: Please also take on notice the two years before that as well: 2012-13, 2011-12 and the two years before that. Mr Bath: Yes, but are we talking about— Senator BUSHBY: What I want to see is the trend of how the forecasts actually then move into the actual. Mr Bath: For the actuals, do you just want the 2012-13 year, or do you want the 2011-12 and 2012-13? Senator BUSHBY: No, the actuals and then the forecast period for the three or four years beforehand as well. Mr Bath: I understand, but which actual years do you need? Senator BUSHBY: All the years, including 2012-13 if you can do it. You said you were not sure, but at least 2011-12, 2010-11, 2009-10 and 2008-09. Mr Bath: I think that we can probably dig something up for you. Senator BUSHBY: Thank you.
4	Cormann	APRA	Cooper Review & MySuper	Senator CORMANN: In relation to this whole MySuper issue, did the Cooper review canvass how MySuper would be licensed? Mr Jones: I am not quite certain whether it came out of the Cooper review or not. The legislation requires an authorisation, that is correct, but I do not remember now whether the process for the MySuper— Senator CORMANN: Maybe go and have a look back, and take it on notice.	p. 118, Wednesday 17 October 2012	13/02/2013	28/02/2013

				Mr Jones: I do not think it did come out of Cooper, actually. Senator CORMANN: As I understand it, Cooper recommended a separate licence, but I would be interested in APRA's read on it. Did APRA have a view on how MySuper products would be taken to market through the regulator once the government announced that it would support the MySuper recommendations out of the Cooper review? Mr Jones: We had to establish a process once it was decided that the products would be authorised. This was a little bit unusual for APRA because this is a situation where we are authorising products, given that MySuper is, notionally, a product. We will go through an authorisation process, that is correct.
5	Cameron	ASIC	Self-Managed Superannuation Funds – SMH 13/10/12	Senator CAMERON: Mr Laker, you probably have not seen this article. It is an article by Marcus Padley, who says he is a stockbroker with Patersons Securities and author of stock market newsletter Marcus Today. He says his views do not necessarily reflect the views of Patersons. This is an article that was in the Sydney Morning Herald on 13 October 2012. To me it is a blatant promotion of self-managed super funds. I am just wondering if someone who is promoting themselves as an expert on some financial advice in the press as to what people should do in terms of their super choices, would fall under your purview. Dr Laker: No. Mr Jones: It would be ASIC's responsibility. Dr Laker: It is ASIC's. Senator CAMERON: Sometimes it is very difficult to get the mix. The reason I am thinking it would be you guys is that it is actually about risk profile. His article is about the risk profile of self-managed funds against, basically, industry funds. Dr Laker: Yes. Senator CAMERON: It is about the performance, both relative and actual. So these are issues that go to the organisations that you have	p. 121, Wednesday 17 October 2012 & pp 125-126, Thursday 18 October 2012	13/02/2013	28/02/2013

				responsibility for. He basically promotes self-managed funds in this article. The question I am asking is, if someone is doing this—and it really seems to me to be just a blatant push for the Association of Superannuation Funds of Australia—shouldn't there be some warning to potential investors or people who are looking to pick a superannuation fund, that this is fundamentally an ad for ASFA? Mr Jones: With regard to warnings, there are now warnings on the ATO website, as I understand it, that self-managed superannuation funds are not covered by the same protections that APRA regulated funds are, but I think your question probably goes a bit beyond that. I am not aware of the article but from the sound of things it is probably linked to the advice. I will check out the article, as well. Senator CAMERON: Yes, it was in the Sydney Morning Herald on 13 October 2012. Could you take it on notice and maybe come back. My concern is that self-managed funds do not provide the same protections. Mr Jones: Correct. Senator CAMERON: I am just wondering how we can deal with this as a government to try and protect people who may look at an article like this from a prominent media personality and stockbroker. They may say, 'This is great,' but none of the problems are explained there. If it is just advertising that is fine. Mr Jones: It would probably be a useful question also for ASIC, in the sense that ASIC has also been doing some work recently on the nature of advice given to individuals who are contemplating setting up self-managed superannuation funds. I think, for instance, they had some information about minimum balances and being aware of the costs that may be appropriate. A lot of ASIC work has been done on that. Senator CAMERON: I will take this up with ASIC when they appear.

6	Bushby	APRA	Unit Pricing Errors in Superannuation	Senator BUSHBY: What is APRA's policy and practice in respect of unit pricing errors in superannuation? Mr Jones: I think you should have asked this question a few points before. Senator BUSHBY: I asked lots of questions about unit pricing before, but this one is slightly different. Mr Jones: Do you mean what do we do about errors? Senator BUSHBY: Yes, if unit pricing errors become apparent as part of your work. Mr Jones: We have the unit pricing guide which we put out jointly with ASIC. Unit pricing errors are generally identified by the institutions themselves and quite often the unit pricing errors come from the complexities of the tax legislation surrounding it. Generally speaking the institutions concerned will get in touch with APRA and explain to APRA that they have a unit pricing error. We talk to them about the process by which they will undertake restitution. Senator BUSHBY: You indicated there are a number of reasons this may happen and some of those are above board. What percentage of funds regulated by APRA experience errors? Do you have those sorts of figures? Mr Jones: It is not a statistic we collect in terms of percentage of funds that have unit pricing errors. They tend to be random. The institutions notify us and then we talk about restitution. It is not a large number. I could go back and work out the number and give you a percentage, but I do not think it would have much relevance in the sense of a percentage of the number of funds. It is far more important in terms of the size of the unit pricing errors rather than number. Senator BUSHBY: I suspect that would direct APRA in terms of the response that you would take. If it is a small error it is probably easily fixed, but if it is substantial it may have an impact on some of the owners of the accounts and it may be more important to	pp 122-123, Wednesday 17 October 2012	13/02/2013	28/02/2013

			make sure you get restitution. Mr Jones: You tend to find that the large errors in terms of dollars do not necessarily turn out to be large dollar amounts for individuals, because quite often they are small errors for a very large number of individuals. Senator BUSHBY: Do you conduct any investigations into those that you think are more serious? Mr Jones: Yes, because we have in certain circumstances established complete restitution plans whereby there are a very specific deadlines to be met. Also, it is not just a case of getting restitution for members; it is also a case of looking at the processes that led to the errors in the first place and making sure that they have a mechanism to make sure it does not happen again. Senator BUSHBY: Obviously without naming any, are you investigating any funds at the moment for unit pricing errors? Mr Jones: Not that I am aware of. Senator BUSHBY: Are you aware of any cause for legislative reform to redress unit pricing deficiencies? Mr Jones: No. Senator BUSHBY: Have you received any recommendations on making any legislative changes or that you have looked at providing advice on? Mr Jones: No, not that I am aware of. Senator BUSHBY: Have you issued any enforceable undertakings in respect to retail and employer sponsored funds during the past six years in respect of unit pricing? Mr Jones: I think the answer would be yes. Senator BUSHBY: Please take that on notice. Mr Jones: I will take that on notice and check. Given that most of the unit pricing errors that have been identified over the past number of years have come from retail funds, they may or may not have involved enforceable undertakings depending upon the way in

8-9	Fifield	Fiscal Group (FG)	National Injury Insurance Scheme (NIIS)	Senator FIFIELD: With respect to the National Injury Insurance Scheme, what is the main oversight body for progressing the National Injury Insurance Scheme? I note that there is an NIIS Advisory Group. Is there a ministerial level group above that? Or does the NIIS Advisory Group just report directly to Minister Shorten? Mr Ray: The NIIS Advisory Group reports to Minister Shorten. Obviously then there is the question of cabinet. Leaving that aside, at the Commonwealth-state level there is a—what is it called—standing council of treasurers and disability ministers. That is, if you like, the body that sits between Minister Shorten and COAG. Senator FIFIELD: Is there a senior officials working group as well? Mr Ray: There is a senior officials working group, which I co-chair, and there is a group within NIIS of Commonwealth-state officials. Senator FIFIELD: How often has the NIIS Advisory Group met since it was established? Ms Cattermole: I will have to take that on notice. I do not have that with me. Senator FIFIELD: And how many are in the senior officials group? Mr Ray: The senior officials working group? Senator FIFIELD: Yes. Mr Ray: Many is the short answer but, if you want the exact number, I will have to take it on notice. Senator FIFIELD: And the last time they met? I assume minutes are prepared for each of those meetings?	p. 53, Thursday 18 October 2012	13/02/2013	28/02/2013

This is part of those ongoing discussions. Senator FIFIELD: That piece of work has not yet been concluded to circulate to jurisdictions? Ms Cattermole: That is correct. Senator FIFIELD: Are you able to take on notice and give me a list of titles or topics covered by those discussion papers? Mr Ray: We will take that on notice.
10	Cormann	Fiscal Group (FG)	Final Budget Outcome – Note 10 ‘Interest Expense’	Senator CORMANN: ... I want to get back to an issue that I tried to raise yesterday with the Office of Financial Management but they and the minister said that this was something for fiscal, so I hope you will be able to assist. If we can go to the final budget outcome, page 38— Mr Ray: Is this note 10? Senator CORMANN: Note 10, yes. Essentially, what I am interested in is the reason for the increase in other financing costs, which seems to be quite significant given the estimate was only made a couple of months earlier. Mr Ray: Yes, we were aware; this was passed to us last night. 11	Cormann	Revenue Group (RG)	Expenditure linked to the Minerals Resource Rent Tax and the Clean Energy Future Package	Senator CORMANN: I will go to the expenditure linked to the MMRT and the carbon tax year-on-year, and go through the breakdown over the forward estimates. You would have received our letter asking you to be prepared to answer questions in relation to these matters. It went to the Secretary of the department, given that you are the Acting Secretary. Mr Ray: It did not come to me. We have not seen it. When did you send it? Senator CORMANN: We sent it a little while ago to Dr Parkinson as the Secretary of the Treasury. Are you saying that you will not be in a position to answer questions about this? Senator Wong: It might have gone to Revenue group. Mr Ray: Yes, it might have gone to Revenue. Senator CORMANN: Well, we actually specified Fiscal. Senator Wong: Yes, but if it is not their responsibility I do not know that you can decide that it is, by letter. Senator CORMANN: Is Treasury able to provide us with a list of all the expenditure items which are currently linked to both the minerals resource rent tax and the Clean Energy Future package and underline cash prices on an accrual basis for each year of the current forward estimates to 2015-16? There has been quite a bit of variation on the way. Ms McCulloch: Obviously, we will have to take that question on notice. In relation to the carbon package, are you referring to the package that the government announced in July last year?	pp 55-56, Thursday 18 October 2012

				Senator CORMANN: Yes. Ms McCulloch: Yes, there has been some variations to that as to the passage of the legislation et cetera. Senator CORMANN: So even Treasury has lost oversight as to what is still attached to the mining tax and the carbon tax package. Ms McCulloch: No. Mr Ray: We did not say that. We said— Senator CORMANN: You say that you have not lost oversight but you cannot answer the question. Mr Ray: We said we would take the question on notice because it is a very detailed question, and I apologise for the fact that we were not aware of your letter. Senator CORMANN: I am very disappointed you were not aware of my letter because I wrote it to make sure you were aware of this. I will go through the list that I have and hopefully you will be able to assist us with as much of it as possible. What are your current expenditure estimates for the increase in the superannuation guarantee from nine per cent to 12 per cent for 2012-13, 2013-14, 2014-15 and 2015-16? Mr Ray: That is a question for Revenue group. Senator CORMANN: It is an expenditure item. Mr Ray: It is a question for Revenue group. Senator CORMANN: Why is that? Mr Ray: It is an increase in the superannuation guarantee charge which impacts revenue. Senator Wong: It is not a conspiracy, Senator. It is just who is responsible in the department for what. Senator CAMERON: They don't accept the fact of the global financial crisis. Why would they accept that fact? Senator CORMANN: Is that the case in relation to all of the measures that are attached to the mining tax, or only those that have a revenue impact? Mr Ray: The reason I thought it would be sensible for us to take the

			question on notice is that, for those items which are revenue items such as the superannuation guarantee charge, that is matter for our Revenue group colleagues. They are coming later, so they can help you with that—although they may not in the sense that I do not know there is a breakdown that has been published in that way. The second element, though—the other elements that are a tax; for example, I think there is some infrastructure spending—they would be questions that would be better directed to the relevant portfolios. But we are happy to take the question on notice to see if we can give you a consolidated answer. Senator CORMANN: A consolidated answer would be very useful. What sort of time frame would you need to provide a consolidated answer? Mr Ray: I do not know. Senator CORMANN: Are you able to be more helpful in relation to the allocation for the Regional Infrastructure Fund for each year of the forward estimates? Mr Ray: It is not our portfolio responsibility. Senator CORMANN: So you do not track the fiscal impact of the measures that are related to the mining tax? Mr Ray: We track a lot of things but the actual responsibility for the regional investment is different. Senator CORMANN: Is that the same situation in relation to all of the measures attached to the carbon tax package? Mr Ray: Yes. And it is no different, may I say, from when, for example, the former government introduced the goods and services tax and there were changes to family payments; they were the responsibility of the relevant department, not Treasury. Senator CORMANN: Let's be very specific on what you are taking on notice. 12	Cormann	Macroeconomic Group (MEG)	Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA) – Capital Reserves	Senator CORMANN: Who advises the Treasurer—the question I have here is about the appropriate dividend, but I probably need to rephrase that—on how much is appropriate to leave with the RBA at any point in time? Mr Ray: Treasury. Senator CORMANN: Is that your area? Mr Ray: No. It is the Microeconomic Group, actually. It is also something that you can expect the secretary to be involved in. Senator CORMANN: Can you talk us through the process: the basis on which you have determined that a $500 million dividend this year is the appropriate figure? Mr Ray: No. Technically, the Treasurer determines how much can be left with the Reserve Bank. Senator CORMANN: Sorry? Mr Ray: Technically, the determination is not about how much the dividend is; it is how much can be retained by the Reserve Bank. Senator CORMANN: I am asking because two years ago the RBA described capital reserves of $6.2 billion below what it regarded as desirable in the long term. The reserves now are below $2 billion in 2012-13, so, when you put it to me that the government decides how much is appropriate to be left with the RBA, it seems to me that there is a bit of a disconnect between what the RBA thinks is appropriate and what the government thinks is appropriate, because there is now more than $4.2 billion less than there was only two years ago. Mr Ray: I think that is a question for the Treasurer, but I am happy to take it— Senator CORMANN: A question for whom? Mr Ray: The Treasurer. Senator CORMANN: I do not have the Treasurer here. Senator CORMANN: Sure, but are you able to assist us? Senator Wong: No. Senator CORMANN: At least you are honest! Mr Ray: I think there is a statement in the Reserve Bank annual report. Senator CORMANN: In relation to the government's net financial worth in June 2012, can you confirm that it is the lowest on record? Mr Ray: When you say 'on record', are you referring to table B5 on page 104 of the FBO? Senator CORMANN: Indeed, yes. Mr Ray: I am not going to say it is the worst on record; what I am going to say is— Senator CORMANN: Which one was worse? Mr Ray: I am going to say it is largest negative on record, and the major reason for that is the valuation of the superannuation liability, and that is being driven by the fact that interest rates are very low. Whether they are the lowest in that period, I would need to check, but I would not be surprised.
13	Cormann	Fiscal Group (FG)	Classify Increase to Revenue as Budget Saving	Senator CORMANN: So for how long and how far back has Treasury chosen to classify an increase to revenue as a saving to the budget bottom line? I am talking here about the concept—not specifically the word 'save'—of classifying an increase in revenue as a saving to the budget bottom line. Mr Ray: I do not know but I suspect back to 1901. An increase in revenue would be seen as something that improves the budget bottom line. Senator CORMANN: Sorry: an increase in revenue classified as a saving to the budget bottom line. 				answered. I did not ask whether an increase in revenue improves the bottom line; it manifestly does. The question was: since when has Treasury chosen to classify an increase in revenue as a saving to the budget bottom line, which is quite a different proposition? Mr Ray: I think we are talking semantics. Senator CORMANN: They are very important semantics that give a bit of an illustration of the underlying philosophical base. Senator Wong: This is not a new nomenclature. We can take on notice when it first occurred. Senator CORMANN: I would like to know how new it is. Senator Wong: You might want to look at your own election policy costings, which include revenue measures as savings as well, but we are happy to take on notice when the word 'saving' has previously been used in respect of revenue measures. I am not going to ask Mr Ray to go back to 1901. Senator CORMANN: Peter Costello reassures me that he never used to describe revenue measures as savings to the budget bottom line, so I would be very interested to find out exactly when that specific nomenclature— Mr Ray: I think we have answered one question on notice and that is when the what is called the spend/saves table was first published: it was in the 2008-09 budget. I think we answered that question on notice. It has been the case for many years that we consider revenue changes that improve the budget bottom line are things that improve the budget bottom line. Whether or not we use the words 'save' or 'savings', I do not know.

			Senator LUDLAM: I am also aware that it is in the process of establishment. From the point of view of the committee's work, will we ever be in a position to get direct representatives of the CEFC here—people from the board, for example? Is that somebody that this committee can legitimately call? Senator Wong: We will check that. I would think so. Senator LUDLAM: Before I get all outraged and on my soap box, I will just wait and you can let us know. Senator Wong: There has not been a conscious decision to deny it. Senator LUDLAM: That is all right. Next time. I suspect you will be able to help me out because these are fairly general questions anyway. An implementation plan was handed to the government this March and a board was appointed in August. Industry has certainly expressed concerns to us about the pace, the speed, of the establishment of the CEFC and has expressed concerns that it will not be ready to start investing, as scheduled, on 1 July next year. Could you provide a progress report and a timetable on the remaining steps to get the CEFC fully on its feet? Ms McCulloch: I will give you a general answer and then we will see what you are particularly interested in. Senator LUDLAM: Great. Ms McCulloch: Senator, as you know, the CEFC is not due to start investing until post 1 July 2013, so the period leading up to that is the implementation and transition phase. The act commenced on 3 August, the five-member board was appointed on 7 August and the board has met three times since August. Recruitment of a CEO is well advanced and we are expecting to have an outcome on that in the near future. Consideration of accommodation options for the CEFC to be located in Sydney is well advanced. There are three phases to the implementation of the CEFC. At the moment, while the CEFC has a board, it does not have staff. Treasury is providing admin support on a fee-for-service basis for the CEFC. There is a letter of understanding between Treasury and the board,

				which is an agreement about what services we provide where we are absorbing indirect costs, staffing costs et cetera but where the CEFC are reimbursing us for direct costs. Senator LUDLAM: Got it. So when would you expect that this entity will have a physical location and staff of its own? Ms McCulloch: On the basis of our current planning—and we have developed some detailed project plans that we have worked on with the board—early next year there should be a physical and stand-up of the CEFC. Senator LUDLAM: Early next year in Sydney. I suspect we are short of time, although the chair has not pulled me up yet. I wonder whether you could table anything on activities and milestones for the execution of the implementation plan and give us a sense of your work plan—or of CEFC's work plan, such as it is—between now and 1 July next year. Ms McCulloch: There is a whole range of administrative steps that need to be put in place before they can officially take control of their money and so forth—things like audit committees and those sorts of things. Senator LUDLAM: If it is not some grievous breach of national security—and I do not want you to spell it out for me now—can you put on the table for us what those steps are and, to the best of your knowledge, in what order and when they occur. Ms McCulloch: We can take that on notice. Senator LUDLAM: Much appreciated; thank you very much.

			(ARENA)	They are an independent board but they have met with people like the Climate Change Authority and the ARENA board—a whole range of organisations. In terms of the working arrangements between the CEFC and ARENA, they have had discussions but there are no firm decisions. Senator LUDLAM: I just think that is going to be tremendously important. What about engagement with industry thus far? Ms McCulloch: Again, my understanding is that they have had quite extensive engagement to the extent that they can, given that there are only five members of the board at the moment and they have only been in existence since August. They have had quite a number of meetings with industry participants. Senator LUDLAM: Again on notice—and I appreciate what you are providing for us now—if you could give us any further written details on any indications of how the CEFC and ARENA will or will not work together. It is going to be a tremendously important relationship, obviously, if the Commonwealth's investment in this industry is going to— Ms McCulloch: We can take that on notice. Senator LUDLAM: And also anything you are able to tell us about engagement with industry. Will the corporation issue a prospectus at some point? If I am hanging around and this is what I have been waiting for forever in a mini industry, at what point can I knock on your door and get a meeting with somebody about an investment? Ms McCulloch: There are opportunities to meet with the board now. Senator LUDLAM: Industry by industry? Ms McCulloch: A number of industries are coming forward but, in terms of engaging in more serious conversations about applications and those sorts of things, our expectations are that, in the first half of next year once they have some staff and a physical presence, they will be in a better position to engage in a more serious way.

16	Williams	Markets Group (MG)	Purchase of Arnott's by Campbell	Senator WILLIAMS: I am going solely on memory from many years ago, when Campbell bought Arnott's Biscuits. I think Arnott's employed 5,000 people at three factories and in the agreement for the approval of an American based company buying Arnott's Biscuits they said they would increase employment to 7,000. I believe what actually happened is later they shut a factory and reduced jobs by 600. Can you check that out—no hurry, or take that on notice? Mr Murphy: That was a long time ago. It was a cause celebre at the time. Senator WILLIAMS: You should have a file on it. Mr Murphy: I hope so. Senator WILLIAMS: I hope so too. If so, will the legislation be amended or will ASIC be required to amend their guide? Mr Rollings: I am not aware of that conflict, so it is something we would have to take on notice. Senator CORMANN: Would you take it on notice and provide some advice. Mr Rollings: Certainly.
19	Cormann	Markets Group (MG)	Superannuation Funds Transaction Costs	Senator CORMANN: In order to finish off this MySuper third tranche issue, did you assess the transaction costs involved from shifting people's superannuation funds, including chosen funds, to default funds, given that there has to be a change in asset mix and so on? Have you quantified the transaction costs? No, you have not. Do you recognise that they are potentially quite significant and that they would have a further adverse impact for people whose funds are shifted without their approval in that way? Mr Rollings: I guess there will be some costs where asset mixes change. There will be some benefits for members through reduced fees and potentially no commissions. Senator CORMANN: They are significant fees. If you have to sell assets and buy back into assets, firstly, you have the market risk and, secondly, you have the transaction fees. The fact you have said that you have not actually assessed and quantified it further increases my worry about all of this. Mr Rollings: In many cases, these assets will all be held by the same fund and there will be no need for the fund to sell out. It will only be if there are significant changes in investment allocation. Senator CORMANN: I do not think that is right. Mr Murphy: We will look into that.	pp 89-90, Thursday 18 October 2012	13/02/2013	28/02/2013

20	Bushby	Markets Group (MG)	Competition in Banking	Senator BUSHBY: You both—Mr Murphy and Mr Beckett—mentioned the government's competition package. There are a number of things in it and a lot of that was welcomed on a bipartisan basis. This committee, with its references hat on, put out a comprehensive report into competition in banking. One of the things it focused on and found a need for was securitisation and access to funds at a cost-effective basis for smaller competitors to the big banks, noting how that had dried up over the period of the global financial crisis and had not really come back. With securitisation, you noted that there was $20 million last year and $10 million so far this year. Who is issuing the bulk of that? Is it the big banks or the smaller competitors? Mr Murphy: It is a mixture. Some of the banks have got involved— Senator BUSHBY: Obviously they are doing that without the AOFM's involvement, but it does not mean they still cannot do it? Mr Murphy: Yes, that is good. Mr Beckett: It is a mixture. As we said, the large banks will occasionally do a securitisation but we are seeing issuance from smaller banks and non-bank lenders recently. The deals on which the AOFM scaled out of the market were all from smaller, second-tier banks or non-bank lenders. We had Suncorp, AMP, FirstMac, Members Equity, ING—those types of banks. Senator BUSHBY: The AOFM has to be with the smaller guys. Of the $20 billion last year, how much was by the four majors? Mr Murphy: I do not have that figure in front of me. Senator BUSHBY: Take that on notice, and also how much of the $10 million this year is for the four majors. Covered bonds—how is that going? Mr Murphy: Since that has been introduced that has been very successful. Mr Beckett: Covered bonds is going well. 21	Waters	Revenue Group (RG)	Superannuation Fund Investment in Residential Property	Senator WATERS: Pardon my ignorance, but is there any sort of regulation on investment in residential properties by a super fund? Mr Peterson: The short answer is not a lot. The Superannuation Industry (Supervision) Act sets out a bundle of rules around investments to be made by superannuation funds. There are a limited number of rules that would impact here. You could not purchase from a related party and those sorts of things but, in terms of ownership generally, no. There are some specific rules around borrowing by self-managed super funds to purchase things like residential property, but the borrowing rules apply across any type of asset class, not just residential property. Senator WATERS: So the rules relate to the borrowing rather than the nature of the purchase. Mr Peterson: Absolutely so. There is nothing specific, but there are some basic prudential rules in the law that govern what funds can invest in. They need an investment strategy and those sorts of things. Senator WATERS: Is there any sort of policy response under development to guard against contributing to housing affordability problems from this sort of investment sector? Mr Peterson: There is no policy response that I am aware of. Senator WATERS: Are there any plans to start that process? Mr Peterson: That is a policy issue and so I have to defer to Treasury. Senator Wong: Sorry, I was distracting— Senator WATERS: No, that is fine. My question was only that, given that this is part of the mix and we are not too sure how much of an influence the purchase of residential properties by super funds is having on housing affordability, is there any intention by	pp 96-97, Thursday 18 October 2012

You are giving me the overall which I would put to you is 100 per cent offshore petroleum resource rent tax. Mr Heferen: I beg your pardon, Senator. 23	Bushby	Corporate Services Group (CSG)	Appointment of Taxation Commissioner	Senator BUSHBY: Thank you. Mr Quigley, I note that the commissioner is not here tonight and I understand he has other obligations. His term expires in January next year, as I understand it. What process is in place for his reappointment or the appointment of a replacement, if he chooses not to apply? Mr Quigley: That is something for government. I have no say in that or a role to play. 24	Cameron	Revenue Group (RG)	Review of Trusts	Senator CAMERON: Good evening, Mr Quigley. I want to return to the issue of trusts. We have had some exchanges before on this issue. I am afraid this issue of trusts is a long game for me, so I am going to be back every now and again on this issue. There is an inquiry into trusts—is that correct? Mr Quigley: When you say an inquiry, the government has announced a review of trusts. Senator CAMERON: I understand one of your officers—it may have even been you; I am not sure—made a speech to the effect that there will be no imposition of increased tax as a result of the review. 				dealing with the taxation of trusts—is being dealt with in the Treasury. As I understand it, one of the overarching constraints on it is that it has been made clear it is not a revenue-raising exercise. It is an attempt to take the provisions that are there and try to make sure they are more understandable and updated to make sure they reflect modern circumstances but not an attempt to revisit the underlying policy to create greater revenue. Senator CAMERON: That sounds like what I read somewhere. Was it Treasury that made that comment? Mr Heferen: If someone was out there making a speech at a conference in relation to these issues and it was a government official, then I suspect they were from the Treasury. To confirm, I will take it on notice.
25	Cameron	Fiscal Group (FG)	Regulation of Trusts - COAG	Senator CAMERON: There have been some high-profile cases, such as the Gina Rinehart case in terms of the super trust that she is involved in, and there have been arguments and litigation about governance. Will your review deal with governance issues? Mr Heferen: I am pretty sure in saying that governance of trusts would be a matter for state regulation. Senator CAMERON: So there is no federal regulation of the governance of these massive trusts? Mr Heferen: That is my understanding. The Commonwealth, as you are probably aware, regulates the behaviour of companies through ASIC, the securities regulator. But my understanding is—and I stand to be corrected—that the regulation of trusts is at state level, although some trusts do have a corporate trustee. So one of the trustees will be a company formed. Senator CAMERON: There is an issue for COAG, if there ever was one. Would that be a legitimate COAG issue? It is not a policy issue; it is a technical issue that I am asking about. Senator Wong: We were just pausing to think. Mr Heferen: I am not sure if I am well placed to comment on that.	p. 112, Thursday 18 October 2012	22/1/2013	7/2/2013

26	Cormann	Fiscal Group (FG)	Final Budget Outcome – Note 10 ‘Interest Expense’ #2	Senator CORMANN: I want to go to an issue which I discussed with some of your colleagues this morning. Can you look at the final budget outcome, in particular note 10 in relation to 'interest expense'. It is probably more a question for the ATO. I see you look a bit intrigued, but bear with me. If you look at 'interest expense' on page 38 there is a section 'other financing costs', which increases from $1.44 billion to $2 billion and $6 million for the 2011-12 financial year from the estimate at the budget in May and the final budget outcome by 30 June 2012. There is a variation there of just under $600 million in a period of two months. Fiscal have said that the main reason for that is an increase in the interest cost because of overpayments to the tax office. Are you aware that variation in the expense of other financing costs has happened? What I am trying to get to is the reason as to why there can be such a big blowout—39 per cent—in less than two months. Mr Quigley: That is a matter for Treasury. Senator CORMANN: Is it? They did say that it was because of an increase in interest costs on overpayments to the ATO, but that is not something that you— Senator Wong: No—he said that was one— Senator CORMANN: It was the main factor. There were others. They were going to take the breakdown— Senator Wong: I think Mr Ray said there were a number of factors. That was one of the large factors. I cannot remember the words he used. Senator CORMANN: He did say it was the biggest component. Senator Wong: Mr Quigley cannot answer questions about this line	pp 113-114, Thursday 18 October 2012	22/1/2013	7/2/2013

				item. Senator CORMANN: What I am trying to find out from the ATO is what happened in the period from early May to the end of June 2012 that would have caused such a significant overpayment that would have increased interest costs to that extent compared to what was anticipated in early May. Mr Quigley: I am not in a position to tell you. I am not even sure whether, if I take it on notice, I would be able to, but I will certainly have a look. Again, it might be one that my Treasury colleagues and I need to work together on. Senator CORMANN: If you could take it on notice, for sure, but bear with me for a moment. You did not even realise that there was this blowout? Senator Wong: Come on! CHAIR: Senator Cormann, you are asking about final budget outcomes in the document. It is a Treasury matter. You have had an extensive discussion with Treasury. This is not a taxation issue. The official has said that he cannot respond and the minister has said that he will not respond. In terms of this discussion, I think we are done. Senator CORMANN: Chair, with all due respect, Mr Ray earlier today pointed to the ATO as the main reason as to why there had been the blowout. Senator Wong: I think that is a verballing of him. Senator CORMANN: I am not saying it is their fault, but something happened at the ATO, clearly. If you could take it on notice, that would be very useful, and maybe review the Hansard to see what Mr Ray said about the increase in the interest costs, because of larger overpayments, caused it, and then you might be able to assist us, at least on notice...

30	Williams	ASIC	Section 420A of the Corporations Act - Insolvency Practitioners	Senator WILLIAMS: I have real concerns around section 420A of the Corporations Act, regarding insolvency practitioners selling assets at or around market value. Senator Bishop, Senator Bushby and I have just been participating in a banking inquiry. In one bloke, Jim Neale's, public submission, his asset was sold by a receiver even though he was not a company. I have asked you about this before. Even when receivers sell for privateers, they still must abide by the Corporations Act. An asset valued at $4 million was sold for $650,000. After the sale the valuation was $3.8 million. To me, that seems a very cheap sale of that asset. Are you prepared to look at something like this? Since then, has the AVO implemented any measures to address travel costs and moved to change procedures? Mr Becker: That was a one-off situation of a re-engagement strategy after a number of years where we had not had any meetings in the regions. That has finished and any future meetings will be held at the most cost effective site, which in general would be Canberra. Senator BUSHBY: Could you advise your total staff numbers and how many of those staff are classified as administrative support? I am happy for you to take that on notice. In particular, the Belgium and Finnish embassies got a bit upset over the amount that their rent had increased over the 20-year period since the last one. I imagine it is probably reasonable that it has gone up. I am particularly interested in when the AAT became involved. They made some critical comments of the way that the valuations were undertaken. I note that they also made some critical observations of the private valuers that the embassies engaged for their valuations. Have you looked at the issues that were raised by the AAT and have you taken any measures to address those issues? 			staff agency like ours where we are administering a very large and complicated system—pretty much every Australian, pretty much every small business and every large business, a range of not-for-profits and the rest of it. A large part of our challenge is to educate people about the way the system operates and their obligations. The vast majority of people want to do the right thing. We invest heavily in helping people understand what their obligations might be. So, when you get inside that 277, you get a bit of a sense of the different activities that we are engaging in. Of that 277, less than 10 are people who are involved in actively taking inquiries from the media and developing press releases on particular issues. The rest of the 277 are engaged in a broad range of activities. For example, just to give you a sense, we have a presence on social media sites. There is an effort required to maintain a Facebook site or to develop YouTube videos and those kinds of things. People who are involved in that kind of production and maintenance work are counted in that number. ACTING CHAIR: I hear what you are saying, and it sounds reasonable. But a similar argument could be mounted, at least to some extent, by many other agencies that have many fewer people employed in those roles. I accept that you potentially have a greater interaction with the public than many other agencies do and therefore there is a greater need for that, but it is still extraordinary that you have 271. The next highest is 175, and that Defence and Defence Services. Then it rapidly goes down, with most of the agencies having somewhere in between 25 and 75. Mr Oleson: I think there are a couple of points there. I do not know that I can speak on behalf of other agencies as to who exactly they have counted in their numbers. ACTING CHAIR: That may well be the answer. Mr Oleson: We have taken a methodology and counted people on a certain basis. We are working through that. The major volume comes in around May, and that increased the stock on hand, which required us to change our strategies and put more resources into clearing that backlog. I am not asking you to think of what the normal punter would think, but I suppose the normal punter out there is saying, 'Aha, this will do me!' They go on to say: Even better— so there is something even better than a bullet-proof trust structure— enjoy a rapid return on your investment, with specialised programs proven to measurably boost tax savings. I suppose that is reasonable. Senator CAMERON: So you have no idea whether that general statement that they are making and that is part of their push to the public has any validity? Mr Quigley: We administer the tax law. These are issues are that are to do with common law, with property law and the like. I do not understand how they would impact on the taxation side of a trust. Senator CAMERON: You do not? Mr Quigley: No. Senator CAMERON: So if there are legitimate tax obligations under arrangements outside a trust, what it seems to me is that these people are saying, 'Put it in a trust and we will put it outside of any liability threats, negligence threats, legal claims fees, unnecessary taxes and excessive taxes.' I would have thought these were fundamental issues for you. Mr Quigley: Senator, the only fundamental issues are the last couple that you mentioned, which are the taxation implications of the trust. If you go to the other legal aspects then we have no responsibility and we have no power to administer them or to comment on them. Senator CAMERON: They refer to devastating negligence. I'm not sure what that is, but negligence can be not paying your tax. Senator Wong: I think Mr Quigley has taken a number of things on notice. Obviously we will respond to things that the ATO can comment on or can respond to. These assertions are still off the company's website, are they? Senator CAMERON: Yes. Mr Quigley can respond. I suppose he can make a response to some of the tax issues you raised. Senator CAMERON: I am going to keep going. Senator Wong: The only point I was going to make about negligence was that I assumed, just listening to that, that it was talking about civil litigation, which is obviously not an ATO matter. Senator CAMERON: I might take it up with the Attorney-General's office. I will do that. But this is the doozy, and it is squarely in your patch. It says: Learn the secrets to trust structures that help investors reduce their taxes and protect their portfolios. Are there secrets in trust structures? What is the issue here? Mr Quigley: Senator Bushby mentioned spin, and maybe that is a bit of spin on the services that can be offered. 75	Milne	ABS	Environmental-Economic Accounts	75. The ABS annual report says that “the development of environmental-economic accounts for Australia is a key priority for the ABS”. Can you describe what you are working on?	Written - 26 October 2012	30/01/2013	7/2/2013
76-77	Milne	ABS	Environmental Accounting in Practice	76. In Environmental Accounting in Practice (May 2012, page 22) you say "environmental expenditure accounts are not currently produced for Australia, but have been in the past" and that (page 82) "environmental protection accounts were produced in the past". Why are they not produced now? 77. In Environmental Accounting in Practice you discuss the problems in valuation of environmental assets. The examples you give relate the value of assets to capitalising flows of market-based transactions - so for example the value of the Great Barrier Reef could be calculated by capitalising income from tourism operations there. But would this put any intrinsic value on wilderness too remote to be visited by significant numbers of tourists? Conceptually, should the value be the amount the average person would need to be paid to feel as well off if the wilderness was not there, multiplied by the number of people, and have any surveys been done that could start to measure this? 151-152	Joyce	Fiscal Group (FG)	Final Budget Outcome – Receipts and Revenue Tables	Regarding the receipts and revenue tables in the 2011-12 FBO (ie Tables 3 and 4 of pages 5 and 8 respectively), they are clearly the most detailed and user-friendly, and particularly in relation to tax receipts and tax revenue. They appear to be best practice, which Treasury has primary carriage over. The same cannot be said about many of the other tables in the FBO – most of which lack a	Written - 26 October 2012	1/2/2013	7/2/2013

This can be seen in Table 5 (page 10) on expenses, Table 6 (page 11) on net capital investment, Table 7 (page 13) on net worth and net debt, and in all the Financial Statements in Part 2. Also, fewer useful sub-totals tend to be provided – for example, Table 5 (page 10) on expenses. The Department of Finance has the greatest carriage over these tables. The equivalent tables in the MYEFO and Budget publications tend to also have no variation column and fewer useful subtotals. 151. Is it not true that including these conveniences, as the receipts and revenue tables do, would save many people across the country (and beyond) from each having to do the same calculations to arrive at these useful variations and sub-totals. 152. Is this something that the Department Finance, with the persuasion of Treasury, could consider in the upcoming MYEFO, Budget and FBO publications?
153-156	Joyce	Markets Group (MG)	National Interest Test	Regarding the Foreign Investment Review Board (FIRB) and its guidelines in relation to the national interest test: 153. What is the policy basis underlying why all proposed purchases of residential properties by foreign investors require FIRB approval without any de minimis or monetary thresholds applying? 154. This stringent policy does not similarly apply to proposed purchases of agricultural land by foreign investors. Instead, only those above a de minimis or monetary threshold of $244 million (indexed to inflation each year) need scrutiny and approval from FIRB. This in effect allows all purchases of agricultural land to be exempt from FIRB and national interest scrutiny, as essentially all such purchases are under this threshold. What is the policy basis underlying this difference in treatment? 155. Is it sensible to treat agricultural land just like any other business asset when it comes to foreign ownership approval and the	Written - 26 October 2012	5/12/2012	7/2/2013

157-162	Joyce	Markets Group (MG)	Cubbie Station	Regarding the recent FIRB approval of the proposed purchase of Cubbie Station by a foreign interest: 157. What is the formal or informal link, if any, between Shandong RuYi Group – one of China’s leading clothing and textile producers (and the dominant (80 per cent) interest of the purchasing consortium) – and the Chinese government? 158. What checks did FIRB make, or how did it satisfy itself that Shandong RuYi Group has been operating all along at true arm’s length from the Chinese government, and that such a true arm’s length relationship will continue in the future? What will be the consequences, if any, should this relationship not remain at true arm’s length? Are there any conditions in the FIRB approval in relation to such an occurrence? 159. How is the finance of Shandong RuYi Group being raised, and what bank or other source(s) is providing it? What is the nature of this source’s (or these sources’) relationship with the Chinese government? 160. Given that the sale price has been revealed to have been below $244 million – the monetary threshold that triggers FIRB referral and approval – why did this proposal ever go, or get referred, to FIRB if the foreign interest involved was a normal private company? 161. In Senate Estimates questioning on the FIRB approval of the Cubbie proposal – in particular, Shandong RuYi Group’s relationship, if any, with the Chinese Government – a Treasury official (Ms Reinhardt) said that, “They are a private company, a	Written - 26 October 2012	29/11/2012	7/2/2013

1787	Cameron	PC	Competition Policy	Senator CAMERON: Seeing that this is your last estimates appearance and you are going to be there until December, I might try and give you a bit of homework. I will go through these questions and will put them on notice. National Competition Policy led to many changes in the way state and federal governments deliver services. In hindsight, were there any areas where you think the changes were poorly conceived or implemented, or would you describe competition policy as an unmitigated success story? I have only got a very short time so I will go through the range of questions. Mr Banks: I could give you a one-sentence quick response to that, and that is that we did not in fact find that everything that NCP achieved was an unmitigated success. There were some problems along the way, including in areas of contracting out and so on, which are documented in a report from 2005. But I will get back in more detail.	pp 109-110, Wednesday 17 October 2012,	6/02/2013	7/2/2013

QUESTIONS ON NOTICE – SUPPLEMENTARY BUDGET ESTIMATES – OCTOBER 2012
TREASURY PORTFOLIO

			Senator CAMERON: Okay. In the nineties, we went to great lengths to increase competition in the provision of public services, but over the same period concentration in a number of private markets has increased quite substantially. Do you think that the market share of Coles and Woolworths is consistent with a competitive market outcome? Do you think that governments that are interested in reducing the cost of living should be concerned with the concentration of the power of the grocery market? The Productivity Commission often assumes that people behave rationally. If that is the case, why do you think so many people with mortgages are willing to pay an average 0.5 per cent higher interest rate to the big four banks rather than take out a loan from a smaller, government guaranteed credit union or building society? So this is about the rational behaviour that underpins much of the analysis of the Productivity Commission. Mr Banks: In some inquiries, we have also drawn on behavioural economics where we think that there are reasons why consumers would behave in ways that could be problematic and require regulation. Again, I will try to give a detailed answer in response to that. Senator CAMERON: It has been suggested that around 25 per cent of electricity customers are swapping electricity retailers each year and that retailers are spending large amounts of money on door-to-door salespeople who often confuse customers more than inform them. Do you think that this kind of competition is delivering benefits for consumers? I do not know if you have ever looked, but the range and complexity of mobile phone plans is really quite bewildering. If you had to choose a private mobile phone plan for yourself or a family member, do you think you would feel confident that you can choose the best possible plan for your needs? Do you think that mums on buses and people with poor English would make good choices? Given the PC assumes people are rational, can the phone market work efficiently if most consumers

				are completely confused? The Productivity Commission has been deeply concerned with market imperfections such as government monopoly and trade protection. Why do you think the PC has spent such a small proportion of its budget looking at other forms of market imperfection such as the market power of oligopolies such as Coles and Woolworths or externalities such as greenhouse gas emissions? Mr Banks: Again, when you say that we always assume that consumers and investors are rational, that is true to a point but we also look at issues of information failure, asymmetric information and so on. It would depend on which inquiry we were looking at. For example, the question of concentration will be looked at in the context of a particular inquiry. Sorry, I did not mean to interrupt you. We will get back to you with more detail.
1788	Cormann	Fiscal Group (FG)	Dividend Income – Government Owned Entities	Senator CORMANN: Now I will move to the issue of dividends from government bodies. Given the sensitivities of providing a breakdown of dividend income in future income years for government-owned entities—and we have had that discussion before; we understand the commercial in confidence aspects of that—could Treasury provide us with a breakdown by government entity of actual dividend income received for 2009, 2010, 2011 and 2012—that is, past financial years? This is as per note 5, statement 9 in the 2012-13 budget paper. Somebody is nodding. Mr Ray: Again, it is probably better directed at Finance. We are happy to take it on notice. That information would be published in the relevant annual reports. Senator CORMANN: Sure. But you have to go everywhere and anywhere, and it is quite hard to find it. Mr Ray: As I said, we are quite happy to take it on notice. 				would prefer that it be put on notice for the department of finance, because it is their accountability because it is non-tax revenue. But, if you want us to take it on notice, we will take it on notice. ... Senator CORMANN: For the dividends that are paid in financial years 2009-10, 2010-11, 2011-12, are we able to get—on notice, if you must—the declaration date and value when the dividend was declared; the date and value of the cash which was transferred to government; and when the dividend was actually paid? Senator Wong: All of this is in the annual reports of the GBE. Senator CORMANN: The thing is that it goes into some specifics here, and there is a reason we are looking for it. It is obviously relevant from Treasury's fiscal areas—the timing of these things is obviously relevant. Mr Ray: Obviously we do not have that sort of information at our fingertips—not least because it is the department of finance's responsibility not ours—but we are happy to take it on notice. Although, again it would be preferable from our point of view if you put it on notice to Finance, because of the rules—the fact that we cannot refer the question to them.

1790	Bushby	APRA	Questions on notice from Supplementary Budget Estimates 2011 and Budget Estimates 2012	Senator BUSHBY: I do not expect you to have the answers, so please take on notice the dates that questions on notice 519 from last October and 209-214 and 77 from May this year were forwarded to Treasury. Senator Wong: I will ask where those are at. I did ask for some statistics on this. We took 1,334 questions on notice at the last budget estimates in this portfolio in the last hearings. I am advised that a total of 83 have yet to be provided to the committee. That is obviously from the budget estimate round. Senator BUSHBY: One of those is from October last year. Senator Wong: Okay. I would reflect to the committee that is an extraordinary number of questions for a portfolio. It is well ahead of what we took on notice in Finance. It is no criticism, but that takes significant resources. Senator BUSHBY: Here the agency has done the work and has forwarded the answers. I was curious to work through why we have not received them. Senator Wong: I have not taken issue with your question, I just	p. 122, Wednesday 17 October 2012	13/02/2013	28/02/2013

1791	Cameron	Markets group	High – Frequency Trading	Senator CORMANN: What are you doing at present in the context of the issue of high-frequency trading, dark pools and the way high-frequency trading and dark pools are undermining the integrity of the market? Mr Murphy: We are working closely with ASIC on high-frequency trading. Again, high-frequency trading is quite a debate internationally and domestically. At the moment, we do not think it is harming the market. Senator CORMANN: It does lessen the transparency of information in the market place, though, does it not? Mr Murphy: It does, to some extent, but at least it is traded on the market. It gives market players a better price and, to some extent, it reduces volatility. Senator CORMANN: Whereas dark pools are off the market? Mr Murphy: Correct. Whereas dark pools are off the market and, at the moment, are possibly quite manageable. What we are really looking at—and ASIC can probably talk to you further tonight about this—is whether we have got enough market regulatory arrangements in place to ensure that these dark pools are appropriately regulated. ASIC has looked at making sure that, before you go into dark pools, there has to be meaningful price improvement. In other words, you should stay on the lit market unless you are on the organised market and that you can demonstrate that you are going to benefit people. There are also questions as to whether there should be a minimum size as to what could be traded in dark pools.	p. 94, Thursday 18 October 2012	18/12/2012	7/2/2013

				These are all issues that ASIC made some pronouncements about. A major market survey is being conducted and ASIC is looking in depth at this. These are international things. We cannot be Canute, and say, 'We are not going to be involved in these things.' Senator CORMANN: Thank you very much, Chair. CHAIR: Thank you. Senator Cameron wants to put a question on notice. Senator CAMERON: Mr Murphy, I like the idea that we cannot be Canute on some of this stuff, so could you give us some details on notice of the financial transaction taxis that are trying to deal with some of this high- frequency trading around the world and give us details of what is happening?
