Answer:

As at 28 February, NBN Co had 69 full-time employees tasked with ensuring that all Australian householders, businesses, community groups, Australia's 565 local councils, state and territory governments and their departments and agencies as well as NBN Co employees are aware of and understand the steps necessary to transition to the NBN.

Their work to encourage a smooth migration to the NBN accords with NBN Co's obligation, as part of the Commonwealth's agreement with Telstra, "to ensure to the maximum extent practicable" that people receive advance notice of the planned migration to the fibre and are familiar with all the steps they need to take to switch over to the NBN.

These employees are based in capital cities and other locations as required.
