Question:

Senator Wong asked in writing:

Fair Pay Commission - Consultation Were the public consultation sessions open to all comers? What was the process for people who wanted to attend?

Answer:

Any member of the public who was interested in attending the public consultations was able to register to attend.

In order to attend people registered through the Commission's 1300 number. Following this, information was sent about the session, confirming the time, date and location and outlining the purpose and format of the session. People were also able to attend even if they had not registered.
