

Introduction

Background

- 1.1 The House of Representatives Standing Committee on Economics (the committee) is empowered to inquire into, and report on, the annual reports of government departments and authorities tabled in the House, that stand referred to the committee in accordance with the Speaker's schedule.
- 1.2 The 2014 annual report (annual report) of the Australian Prudential Regulation Authority (APRA) stands referred to the committee in accordance with this schedule and the committee resolved at its meeting on 26 November 2014 that it would conduct an inquiry into the annual report.
- 1.3 Regarding APRA's appearance before the committee on 20 March 2015, the committee chair stated that 'we are looking forward to continuing our scrutiny of APRA on important issues in prudential regulation including governance and accountability in the superannuation industry, the resilience of the banking sector to possible global shocks, the implications of new capital requirements for banks, and property lending standards.'¹
- 1.4 APRA was established by the Australian Prudential Regulation Authority Act 1998 (Cth) as the prudential regulator of the Australian financial services industry. It oversees Australia's banks, credit unions, building societies, life and general insurance companies and reinsurance companies, friendly societies, and most of the superannuation industry. APRA currently supervises institutions holding $4.9 trillion in assets for Australian depositors, policyholders and superannuation fund members.²

- 1.5 The annual report describes APRA's mission as 'to establish and enforce prudential standards and practices designed to ensure that, under all reasonable circumstances, financial promises made by institutions we supervise are met within a stable, efficient and competitive financial system'.³
- 1.6 All deposit-taking institutions, life and general insurance and reinsurance companies and friendly societies must hold an APRA licence to operate in Australia. APRA also licenses trustees of prudentially regulated superannuation funds.⁴
- 1.7 After an institution is licensed, it is subject to ongoing supervision by APRA to ensure that it is managing risks prudently and meeting prudential requirements. APRA aims to identify potential weaknesses in its regulated institutions as early as possible. It applies a risk-based approach under which institutions facing greater risks receive closer supervision.⁵
- 1.8 APRA employs a cooperative approach to resolving issues with supervised institutions. However, where an institution is unwilling or unable to cooperate, APRA is empowered to take enforcement action against an institution, or against individuals associated with that institution. Some enforcement options include formal investigation, imposing conditions on an institution's licence, appointment of a replacement trustee and taking criminal action against a person or institution.⁶

Scope and conduct of the review

- 1.9 APRA appeared before the committee at its second public hearing to review the 2014 annual report in Canberra on 20 March 2015.
- 1.10 The proceedings of the hearing were webcast over the internet, through the Parliament's website, allowing interested parties to view or listen to the proceedings as they occurred. The transcript of the hearing is available on the committee's website.⁷
- 1.11 This report focuses on the issues raised in the annual report and, in particular, on matters raised at the public hearing in Canberra on 20 March 2015.
- 1.12 At the public hearing, the committee examined the current policy settings and regulatory framework for enforcement of prudential standards and practices by APRA. Issues canvassed at the hearing included the superannuation industry's progress implementing the Stronger Super reforms, the future of property lending standards and capital requirements for authorised deposit-taking institutions, and the potential impact of the Financial System Inquiry's (FSI) suggested reforms and Basel III on the Australian banking sector.
