Breakdown of the University of Sydney's revenues and expenditure

Question on Notice

"I did ask for a breakdown of all the revenues that you are receiving in $100,000 increments...

.... Are you able to provide this committee, on notice, with a breakdown as to how all of your moneys are being spent?..."

Senator Henderson, Hansard Proof Transcript, 26 August 2024, p.48

Answer

Number of electronic confirmations of enrolment issued for Semester 1 and Semester 2 2025, and for 2026

Question on Notice

“Could I ask you to take on notice how many confirmations of enrolment you have issued for semesters 1 and 2 in 2025 and also whether you've issued any confirmations of enrolment for 2026.” Senator Henderson, Hansard Proof Transcript, 26 August 2024, p.55

Answer

As at 27 August 2024 the University had issued the following electronic confirmations of enrolment to international students for 2025 and 2026.

Total eCoE for direct undergraduate and postgraduate entry

Semester	UG	PG	Total
Coursework S1,2025	579	2050	2629*
Coursework S2,2025	5	9	14

* The coursework total number includes commencing students who suspended their 2024 enrolment due to visa delays and subsequently received an eCOE for S1, 2025 (75 PG + 19 UG).

Total eCoE for both Centre for English Teaching and University of Sydney Foundation Program

Explanation of how international student fee revenue cross-subsidises teaching of domestic students

Question on Notice

“I’m going to be so quick, because I’ve got two more questions. You talk about the importance of international students in the cross-subsidy, but I haven’t seen that modelling or how you calculate the cross-subsidy. Are you able to, on notice, provide the committee with details about how that cross-subsidy works? We do need to understand the costs of each course—how it’s delivered—and then how that cross-subsidy works as well. If you could provide the detailed data that we need to assess that, we’d be really grateful.” Senator Henderson, Hansard Proof Transcript, 26 August 2024, p.55

Answer

How does the cross-subsidy from international to domestic students work?

The University’s submission on the ESOS Amendment Bill included the following information:

“International student fees play a critical role in Australia’s highly regulated tertiary education system, where this income is critical for sustaining teaching of domestic students in fields like medicine and health, veterinary science, agriculture and the creative and performing arts, where delivery costs exceed available Commonwealth funding. For example, for every full-time Australian citizen who studies medicine or veterinary science, the University of Sydney needs to find more than $10,000 in additional funding each year to cover the full cost of teaching and training each of them - funding sourced largely from international student fees.” University of Sydney submission on the Bill, p.4

The data supporting these claims come from the University’s submissions over many years to the Department of Education’s annual Transparency in Higher Education Expenditure exercise.

The Department regularly publishes the de-identified results of these transparent costing exercises, which Deloitte Access Economics has undertaken for the Department since 2011 (covering 2010). Deloitte’s most recent report covering 2019 and 2020 is available here, while a range of data from the studies are published on the Quality Indicators for Learning and Teaching (QILT) website here.

In its latest report Deloitte found that for various fields, the average costs universities incur teaching Commonwealth supported students is higher than the ‘base funding’ they receive for each of these students. Deloitte also cautioned against drawing inferences regarding the sufficiency of Commonwealth Grant Scheme funding from the results of their study because of the widespread view that Commonwealth Grant Scheme funding includes a component to cover the base research activity that Australian universities must meet as a condition of registration.<sup>1</sup>

In any course where the cost of delivery per student is higher than the funding a university receives (linked to Commonwealth supported students enrolled full-time in the course), the shortfall is being met from other discretionary revenue sources that are available to the university. In the University of Sydney’s case, the largest source of discretionary revenue is the fees paid by international students.

Costing methodology

The University uses the following method to estimate the cost of teaching and scholarship by field of education and to meet the Department’s annual cost of teaching reporting requirements:

- |               |  |
|---------------|--|
| Step 1 | Determine academic staff time splits between teaching and research by faculty or school.   |
| Step 2 | Determine splits between teaching and research for direct (faculty/school) professional staff and non-salary expenses.   |
| Step 3 | Determine splits between teaching and research for central costs (salaries and non-salaries).  |
| Step 4 | Apply exclusions to items out-of-scope for the exercise (externally funded research grants, unfunded research and research training activities, commercial activities, offshore teaching, philanthropic activities, and investment costs). |
| Step 5 | Apportion costs by Field of Education (FOE) and EFTSL.   |
| Step 6 | Calculate an estimate of 'in-kind' teaching costs.   |
| Step 7 | Calculate an estimate of the full economic cost of capital depreciation/deterioration.   |

Common reasons for costs differences between Fields of Education

The main causes of significant differences in our estimates of teaching costs between courses and units of study that sit in different FOEs include:

- The proportion of academic full-time equivalent (FTE) staff time allocated to teaching and scholarship.
- The proportion of central University costs allocated to teaching and scholarship, using the relevant unit academic staff time splits.
- Differences in student to staff ratios and fixed cost structures between faculties and schools, driven in some cases by stringent external accreditation requirements for resourcing and/or relatively low student to staff ratios (for example, Medicine, Dentistry, Veterinary Science, Creative and Performing Arts).
- Different infrastructure and space costs due to the types of laboratories, properties, clinics, facilities and equipment that are required in many disciplines (for example, Natural Sciences, Veterinary Science, Agriculture, Medicine, Music and other Creative Arts).
- Differences in mode of delivery, preparation requirements, contact hours and assessment requirements.
- Higher salary and associated costs in some disciplines are necessary to attract quality candidates in the competitive Sydney market where salaries are relatively high – especially in some professional fields – and where living costs are also relatively expensive.

Domestic enrolments from 2000 to 2023

Question on Notice

“It's very hard to understand, because we get insufficient data, and that is a huge issue. It appears, based on your 2000 enrolments compared to, say, 2023-24, that there are fewer Australian domestic undergraduate students—

Prof. Scott: Year 2000 or 2020?

Senator HENDERSON: Compared to 2000, it looks like there are less domestic undergraduate students than there were back in 2000. We can't get the breakdown, but based on the huge increase in international students—and there were only a very small number of international students.

Prof. Scott: Yes, that's true.

Senator HENDERSON: In 2000, there were only about 3,000. Now there are, as you say, over—

Prof. Scott: Yes. Across the sector, a decision was made to— “p.47

“Also, Professor Scott—I'm trying to whip through my questions really quickly—have you got those domestic undergraduate numbers? We don't have any insight into what those numbers are, but it looks like domestic undergraduate numbers at the University of Sydney have declined since 2000.”

Senator Henderson, Senate Standing Committee on Education and Employment, Legislation Committee, Hansard Proof Transcript, 26 August 2024, pp.47 and 55

Answer

University of Sydney domestic student headcount in 5-year increments from 2000 to 2023

	2000	2005	2010	2015	2020	2023
Undergraduate	23,146	22,464	26,497	27,518	25,555	25,476

Definitions:

Headcount is the distinct count of Student ID for students with at least one credit point of study in that academic year. Note the total may be slightly different to the sum of the undergraduate and postgraduate components as a single student may count as undergraduate and postgraduate in the same year but only once in the total.

Earlier years of postgraduate research students are not included as the record of which students were actively studying has changed since then.

Breakdown of international student numbers by each course and country, at both undergraduate and postgraduate level

Question on Notice

“Can you please provide a breakdown of international student numbers for each course at your universities, both undergraduate and postgraduate... and also a breakdown by country...” Senator Henderson, Hansard Proof Transcript, 26 August 2024, p.55

Answer

The table below provides a breakdown of international student enrolments in all undergraduate and postgraduate courses offered by the University that have international students enrolled in them, as well as by country in alphabetical order for each course.

Definitions:

Enrolments is the distinct count of candidatures in that course.

Inclusions:

Students that have taken at least 1 credit point of study in 2024.

International students only.

To protect the privacy of individual students from countries with small enrolments in a course, for any count with less than 10 students we have removed and replaced with “Less than 10”.
