Parliamentary inquiry into a better family law system to support and protect those affected by family violence

Issue date: 21 July 2017

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY TO HEAR FROM A RANGE OF EXPERTS

The Parliamentary Inquiry into a better family law system to support and protect those affected by family violence will hold an intensive set of public hearings across Monday 24 July and Tuesday 25 July in the Melbourne CBD.

The Committee will hear from a range of experts in the field, including Ms Rosie Batty founder of the Luke Batty Foundation, Mrs Hetty Johnston AM founder of Bravehearts, Women's Legal Services Australia, and the Hon Marcia Neave AO, the head of the former Victorian Royal Commission into Family Violence.

A range of other organisations will provide evidence, including specialist service providers for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander families, culturally and linguistically diverse families and those living in regional and remote locations.

The Chair of the Committee, Sarah Henderson MP, explained that the hearings are an opportunity for the Committee to learn what has been recommended to date and what is required moving forward.

“In Australia, police respond to 723 family violence matters every day. That equates to approximately one every two minutes. Family violence has been front and centre of our national debate in recent years, with many expert reviews and reports examining what is required to address the issue”, Ms Henderson said.

“Over these two days of hearings, the Committee will hear from preeminent Australians and will be an opportunity to take expert advice so that we may begin to move forward and improve the family law system's response to family violence in Australia.”

Public hearing details:

9.00 am to 4.15 pm, Monday 24 July
