

To whom it may concern

All animal cruelty needs to have consequences. No one should be allowed to continue cruel practices – but targeting those who are trying to stop these practices is wrong. Why within one day? How can that possibly result in a fair case for either side? Stop spending all your time trying to hamper the fight and instead start getting to grips with the real issue. Do something to make Australians proud, stand up against all forms of cruelty, and show Australians that at least some politicians still have integrity and compassion. Thank you.
