

I would like to see all vehicles sold in Australia to have faulty lights sensors. I have a Lexus which shows me when a headlight or taillight malfunctions. I believe that this is not the case with all other vehicle makes. In just about every time I travel the Bruce highway, which quite often, I see many vehicles with only one headlight. Just how many accidents are caused, I don't know? Surely if one manufacturer can have this life saving technology, then others could as well.