

To whom it may concerns,

I am writing to express my opinion about Migration Amendment (Visa Capping) Bill 2010. I believe this bill is unfair to all the applicants who have already lodged their PR application.

I myself am Australian permanent resident since 11 years ago, and my partner has been here for almost 7 years. He studied in Macquarie Uni and Sydney Uni for 5 years and now working as a magazine editor. He also lodged his PR application few months ago, we thought we will have a better future to go until this bill come up. If this bill really passed in the end, it is just so unfair to all the international students just like my partner who has been served this country for years and spends most of their youth times in this land, but in the end they just can't get what they want. I don't believe this is a country like Australia- a country with its identity as multi-culture and fairness- would do.

Regards,
