

To whom it may concern

I am in support of the 10 cent deposit on drink containers.

I believe it will go a long way towards helping to achieve a higher percentage of products being recycled.

I lived in Vancouver, Canada from 2005 to 2008 and experienced this system first hand from both a "check out chick" perspective and a consumer perspective and found that it worked really well.

For those not interested in recycling $0.10 is not a lot extra to pay on a beverage and for those who are interested or want to fundraise for schools etc there is extra incentive to do so. When there is a value on an item it is easier for people not to see it as just rubbish.

I believe if we are going to make it well into the next century we are going to need to make a lot of changes. The 10 cent deposit scheme is a very easy step in the right direction.

Thanks for taking the time to read my email, I really appreciate it.
