Accessibility and quality of mental health services in rural and remote Australia – call for submissions

The Senate Community Affairs References Committee is conducting an inquiry into the accessibility and quality of mental health services in rural and remote Australia.

"Australians struggling with mental ill-health already have the odds stacked against them finding access to mental health services," said Committee Chair, Senator Rachel Siewert.

"This is only exacerbated in the bush, with regional and remote Australians, particularly our first peoples and our farmers, struggling with high rates of mental ill health and suicide."

The committee will be examining a number of aspects relating to mental health services in rural and remote Australia, detailed in the terms of reference below.

The committee plans to hold public hearings at rural and remote locations around Australia. A program of hearings will be released after the close of submissions.

Further information about the inquiry, including published submissions and hearing programs, will be available on the committee website: www.aph.gov.au/senate\_ca.

Making a submission

The committee is seeking submissions from a wide range of people – including service providers, health professionals and members of the public – about their views and experience of mental health services in rural and remote Australia.

While the committee has requested that submissions to the inquiry be received by 11 May 2018, it will continue to consider and accept submissions after this date.

If you are interested in contributing to the committee's inquiry, you may find it helpful to look at the guide for preparing a submission. It includes suggestions on what to include in a submission, a check list, and information about what happens to your submission once it has been received by the committee.

As a large number of submissions may be received for this inquiry, including many of a sensitive and personal nature, there may be a delay between a submission being received and it being considered and approved for publication by the committee. This process may take a number of weeks and the committee thanks submitters for their patience in this matter.

You can ask the committee to keep your submission confidential. Confidential submissions are only read by members of the committee and the secretariat and are not published online. Please include the word confidential clearly on the front of your submission to request this.

The committee emphasises that it is not in a position to provide advice on individual circumstances. The committee's focus is on the broad issues raised in the terms of reference of the inquiry with a focus on rural and remote Australia.
