To Whom It Concerns

I have only just found out about the senate enquiry into forced adoptions. I was 14 when I was made a ward of state and my baby boy was stolen from me.

In Winton where I was held until over 8 months pregnant, I don't remember any pre natal care, no special diet or antonics. I did the same work daily scrubbing floors as the other girls.

I had only come to Australia 4 yrs previously so I was petrified, I had never even heard of lesbians or seen any of the kind of violence I saw there. I was then sent to the Methodist home for pregnant girls in Fairfield.

Whilst in both homes I remember the social workers all telling me how I was not capable of looking after my baby and everyone telling me the baby is better off without me and I was no good. To this day I have no ego it was abused out of me. I've never felt attractive or done myself up as I see other women do. I have no trust in any authority including the medical which makes life hard as I have a lot of physical problems.

The matron in the home in Fairfield made me scrub a dormitory floor while in early labour. She then proceeded to have tea. I knew nothing what was going to happen during or after the birth and was petrified sitting there waiting for her. I demanded to see my baby and they finally relented. I made sure he had 10 toes and fingers and told him I loved him but he's better off without me. Next day I was moved to an after care hospital but my baby didn't come. We were put in a normal ward and every feed time I cried as all the other women got their babies. I'd bury myself under the blanket. Within 6 months I started looking for him.

I went to my parole officer and social worker and was told he had been adapted straight away, which was a lie. I cried for 22 years daily. I got married at 17 after gaining off the rails totally and spending the next 3 yrs in Winton. When I had my 1st child a girl, I cried so hard they had to remove her, as it was like reliving the first birth. I was lucky to have a son next, but nothing could stop the heartache. I wanted my son and enquired again with my husband but was told there was nothing that could be done. After my marriage break up, I was a single Mum and never married again. We would make a cake on my sons birthday and I would tell his sister and brother about him.

When he was 22 the law changed in Victoria and I had been registered everywhere looking for him, I found him. The social workers rang and said he had written to me, but being Easter there was no mail for 5 days.

I was so happy but scared he wouldn't forgive me or like me. I drank a lot that Easter and on the final night before post delivery I couldn't sleep and decided to drive to my daughters. Needless to say I was pulled up for a licence check and ended up losing my licence for 4 yrs for a .05. When I met my son next day as the letter had a phone number and my friend rang him. He came straight down as he lived not far from me all his life - we shook that much we could hardly stand. It was wonderful my prayers were answered. He lived with me on and off but couldn't understand how I could bring up 2 kids on my own but not him. He refused to forgive me, I felt it in our relationship.

He disappeared out of my life again for many years and next time we met was a single father with two sons, one his baby had just recovered from cancer Hodgkin's lymphoma. Then after a few years he married again.

and now I don't see him again. I am grateful I've met him and know he is ok but he will never forgive me for giving him away, even though he knows I was forced to. I have now found out there was funds available to keep my baby. I was not told. Now I find out the injections and medication I was given may affect my children with cancer, cysts and god knows what else! I was given to dry my milk and banned in 1971. It broke my heart when they took my first born from me. I never recovered from the heartache. I've had bad nerves all my life and now finally am getting some much needed counselling. I cannot cry at all, not even at a funeral or from severe pain. I was given no assistance after my sons birth. How can a 14 year old girls signature in 1963 be legal? With now this added fear for my children of conceivably what happened then has affected my whole life. The abuse, lies, and lack of care, haunt me forever. The government failed badly in their duty of care. Yours sincerely

Also the people who adopted him were over 50 yrs old, older than my mother.
He had all his needs met but no cuddles or loving he told me. Being a touchy person he couldn't get over how we say hello with a kiss and always hug each other, with "I love you," said every phrase call or when we see each other. He had never had that. When they passed away his other family disowned him.
They were his uncles, cousins etc.
How cruel is that. I don't cry now as I can't but he is punishing me for giving him away, by withholding my grandkids from me. We needed counselling when we met and Sue needed it all my life. Sorry about my writing but my hand is numb and I blame a lot of my physical problems on the girls home, and my mental problems including the kidnapping of my son and the ruining of my whole life and health. We needed help, we were only kids, but instead we got abuse and lies. And now the fear goes on I've only just found out about DES and what it can do to my children, what about the grandkids a great grandkids no one knows. DES is the medication to suppress lactation. There were trials of medications on the babies in the Methodist home as well and I fear my son may have been involved as his baby had hodkins lymphoma and I have no cancer in my heritage.

They haven't just ruined my life now I find out maybe also my childrens health along with mine.

It is scary, how can the govt get away with all this.

Yours Sincerely
Gene Welch
