The My School website is clearly designed to rank schools. It is simplistic and does not assist parents or students, especially when most cannot choose their school because they are zoned for a particular area. To alter that would cause suffering for families and result in some students having to travel long distances at considerable expense, causing serious financial stress to people in lower socio-economic groups.

The government should discreetly collect data and work to improve schools within the system. That is their responsibility - not to make scapegoats of teachers.
