

I would urge the Government to appoint an independent research team of Clinical Psychologists specializing in family and children's matters to look into the effects of the legislation. Any submissions will be incredibly biased depending on which barrow is being pushed. Family Law is not the place to make decisions based on the anecdotal and fantastical submissions of unbalanced individuals and organisations. The matter requires serious and scientific unbiased research. We are talking about the lives of tens of thousands of children. DO NOT use this matter to win votes or appease the lunatic fringes.
