

Dear Sir,

I would like to address some of the issues related to Migration Amendment (Visa Capping) Bill 2010.

1. First of all according to you, passing this bill will give you power which you will use as a tool to effectively manage the migration programme but what i and many others believe is that you already have that tool which is within the present law for example what you did by revoking the MODL list and by introducing new SOL list so no more student can able to apply for GSM whose studied occupation is not in the list.
2. Second, you said you need a demand driven programme but the given programme is already demand driven the student who applied for a particular occupation was in demand that's why they applied for that occupation.
3. There are many other alternatives than using a capping and ceasing of applications. People will be happy to wait for another 1 year or so than their application get terminated.
4. Moreover I think you really need to something about the bogus colleges, in every 3 -4 months we hear in the news that another college is shut down leaving the students in dark. You really need to do something about these bogus colleges. Students buy education because some colleges are selling education.
5. You need to make it public in the future about the no. Of applications have been received in a particular occupation and how many people you need but this will be totally unfair if you cap and cease present application for any particular occupation .If this happens you will be no more than those bogus colleges which are selling education.

People came here long time before thinking that they will find their future in Australia , respect and admire Australian law and constitution just like any other Australian may be in some of the cases more than some of the Australian citizen. The important phase of their life they spent here was crucial in making anyone's future. People have their future plans in Australia .It's totally not their fault if there is a backlog in the pipeline you should need not to accept those applications if you thought you may not be handle those applications.

I respect your decision as a member of Australian community in a hope that you will not ignore our requests and will find an alternative to make the present onshore applications their way to a great future in Australia.

Regards
