Dear Ms Allan

Re. Inquiry into the Fair Work Amendment Bill 2013

Ai Group appreciated the opportunity to appear before the Committee on 22 April 2013 during the inquiry into the above Bill.

Two questions were taken on notice and answers to these questions are set out below.

Does the Bill cover bullying by union officials?

At page 23 of the transcript, Ai Group took a question from Senator Back on notice regarding whether an employer would be able to bring a complaint about bullying by a union official to the Fair Work Commission (FWC).

We submit that the answer to this question is No. The lack of balance in the bullying provisions of the Bill is highlighted by the fact that the Bill does not permit applications to be made to the FWC to address:

- Bullying of an employer by a union official;
- Bullying of an employer by an employee (e.g. a shop steward); or
- Bullying of an employee by a union official.

The extreme bullying behaviour engaged in by CFMEU officials against Grocon Managers and employees of Grocon who chose to work during the dispute in Victoria last year is described in the attached document distributed by Fair Work Building and Construction (see point 33 on page 7).

Would a medical certificate be required for an employee to access the “transfer to a safe job” provisions?

At page 23 of the transcript, Senator Back queried whether an employer would be able to require a pregnant employee to provide a medical certificate.

We submit that the answer to this question is Yes. Subsections 81(6) and 82A(2) of the Bill give the employer the right to require that an employee provide a medical certificate.

We would be happy to provide any further information that the Committee may require.

Yours sincerely

Stephen Smith
