

Dear Review Committee,

I am very concerned about possible changes to legislation which may actually weaken human rights and freedom of speech. I have worked for 24 years in Asian countries where freedom of speech and human rights are severely limited. Freedom to discuss and question issues freely is just not there. I do not want to see Australia go that way. Right now there is a great deal of unwanted political correctness which dampens the freedom to question and discuss freely. I want to see the kind of tolerance that allows us to debate discuss and, listen and agree to disagree. Not the kind of tolerance which says , keep quiet, do not mention this or tha subject because you may offend someone.

Sincerely, Grant Lock
