

Dear inquiry , here is only 3 examples of the sort of hate things I hope will be prevented from ever happening again. Explained with the context.

1. My other half and myself have a grandson who plays a sport. I had left that a while back for v bad experiences a long rime ago with no intention of returning to that place . Often I been asked to attend to see him play so this had happened previously with another member of that family. I'd arrive thinking I'd see them all of a sudden things changed and the person playing was removed. I'd report the coercive behaviour and whenvit was looked into , there would never be anything to see there . Quite often people were told to ignore the complaint or just dismiss it as rubbish. Although I'd told the family this it is still the same over and over.

2. Threats against indigenous relatives,

This is a long running issue that never seems to leave us one happened a very long time ago whereby one of my other half's relatives were threatened for even saying hello to me.

A person had threatened to harm this person who happens to be indigenous same as our grandson, keeping them away from family. This has never been addressed properly by anyone as it wasn't taken seriously. Recently, there was another occasion with the same relative where a person actually went to his place, demanding to know who they'd been around for some reason. This wasn't reported to authorities.

Another similar to this , my own indigenous relative playing sport was often the subject of many taunts and foul remarks, among this were also threats of harm to this person.

The person has since gone to another club and is doing well so far but why threaten a person with harm when the person making the Threats didn't know the person.

3 Deceased representation.

Around this time or more to the end of March last year, a significant loss had come our way of a son, brother, husband, friend and father to his children.

This was a very widely publicised death and it was in alot of newspapers clear across the country.

One year on from this , myself and some others are being asked the weirdest things,

Where is the person

Why can't we see the person

Did the person really exist

Were we all making it up

Was the person dirty

Was the person a drunk or on drugs

Where was the person from

Along with many more questions over and over.

Privacy was called for originally, this didn't seem to matter for some .

This is horrible one , even though these people who I consider extremely unlikable, nasty people, have nothing to do with the deceased person, id even been asked to show a grave!!!!

How sick is it!!!

This sort of thing has to stop. Especially when it goes well beyond name calling and the like.

Thank you for your time. Regards to all

Heather Webster.
