

I believe this bill would bring benefits to Australia based on the following comments.

- 1) We need a flexible system to “select” potential migrants who can REALLY bring potential to our labor market, not being selected.
- 2) Capping certain visas will enable the department to have more time to focus on other potential applications only to reduce processing time for most classes of applications.
- 3) Like minister said, “you have the right to apply does not mean you have the right to migrate”, we all have obligations bound by national interest.
- 4) Some over-focused class applications will bring imbalance to labor market. Capping can bring dynamic balance based on changing labor needs.
- 5) We do have the right to select certain migrants based on our national interest which can not be driven by applicants.

Hereby I do consent.
