A person failing to comply with an order of a committee to this effect may be found to be in contempt of the Senate.

The committee also takes this opportunity to remind the Australian Transport Safety Bureau of the Senate Parliamentary Privilege Resolutions relating to the protection of witnesses. Specifically, Senate Parliamentary Privilege Resolution 6(10) states that:

A person shall not, by fraud, intimidation, force or threat of any kind, by offer or promise of any inducement or benefit of any kind, or by other improper means, influence another person in respect of any evidence given or to be given before the Senate or a committee, or induce another person to refrain from giving such evidence.

and in Privilege Resolution 6(11):

A person shall not inflict any penalty or injury upon, or deprive of any benefit, another person on account of any evidence given or to be given before the Senate or a committee.

The committee intends to hold a public hearing for this inquiry on Monday, 22 October 2012. In due course the committee secretariat will contact the ATSB to arrange a suitable appearance time.

Dear Senator Heffernan

REQUEST FOR DOCUMENTS

Thank you for your letter of 26 September 2012, requesting that the ATSB provide a range of documents to the References Committee relating to the ATSB's investigation of the ditching of the Westwind II aircraft registered VH-NGA.

The ATSB understands the importance of providing all relevant materials to assist the committee's inquiry and is currently assembling all the documents that meet the terms of your request. At the same time, I draw to the Committee's attention to Part 6 of the Transport Safety Investigation Act 2003 (the TSI Act) and the limitations it places on the ATSB with respect to providing the information.

Nothing I say in that regard is intended to derogate in any way from the information-gathering powers of the Senate. Section 63 of the TSI Act clearly states nothing in the Act affects the information gathering powers of the Parliament.

However, in order to enable the ATSB to operate in accordance with the restrictions of the TSI Act, I respectfully ask that the Committee use its powers to require the production of any ATSB documents rather than request them. At the same time the Committee may wish to consider reviewing the extent of information it requires and form a view as to whether some or all of the information provided to it should be granted confidentiality.

To explain, Division 2 of Part 6 of the TSI Act relates to the protection of 'restricted information'. For the purposes of the TSI Act, restricted information includes almost all information the ATSB acquires or generates in the course of an investigation. Examples include statements, information recorded by investigators, communications with people involved in an occurrence, and recorded information such as air traffic control tapes. It includes all information acquired through use of the ATSB's powers of compulsion.

The TSI Act makes it a criminal offence for a current or former ATSB Commissioner, staff member or consultant to record or disclose restricted information to any person or to a court. The penalty for a breach is imprisonment for two years. The main exception is where such activity occurs while performing functions under the TSI Act (principally through the publication of investigation reports).

These provisions are in place to ensure cooperation with and the free flow of information to ATSB investigations so as to improve safety. There is an expectation that the information the ATSB obtains or generates will not become publicly available other than in the form of an ATSB report and that the information will not be used for blame or liability purposes.

The TSI Act states that it is not a function of the ATSB to apportion blame, determine liability, or (in most cases) assist in court cases. The ATSB is granted powers of compulsion that are to be exercised in this context. The compulsion powers are particularly broad-ranging and include the removal of a person's right not to incriminate themselves. It is important that the information is not used or disclosed other than for the purpose for which it was obtained.

Despite its powers of compulsion, the ATSB is dependent on the cooperation of other parties involved in an action or occurrence. Allowing information obtained or generated through investigation to become publicly available other than in the form of an accident investigation report is viewed domestically and internationally as liable to harm cooperation. For this reason 'restricted information' is subject to secrecy provisions under freedom of information laws. Cooperation diminishes to the extent that parties believe the information they supply will enter the public domain in a way that is to their disadvantage.

As I indicated earlier, these restrictions on disclosure of information do not prevent the Commonwealth Parliament from gathering information for the purposes of its proceedings. Parliament has reserved the right to call upon the ATSB to assist in providing evidence to its inquiries, especially when the manner in which ATSB conducts its investigation is the focus of such inquiries for accountability purposes.

At the same time, the committee's request for the production of documents could potentially undermine the purpose of the restricted information provisions of the TSI Act. I am therefore seeking the Committee's cooperation in three areas:

- to consider the potential implications for cooperation in current and future ATSB investigations resulting from the disclosure of the requested material before determining how much of it should be disclosed to the committee for the purposes of its inquiry;
- to exercise its formal powers to require rather than request the ATSB provide the necessary information (thus releasing us to the extent necessary from our statutory duty to protect the information);
- to treat the restricted information thus obtained appropriately as confidential to the Committee for the purposes of its inquiry.

That said, the ATSB stands ready to provide all necessary information to the Committee and to account for our investigations and the manner in which we undertake them.

Yours sincerely

Martin Dolan
