

This migration amendment bill 2010 will put many families in limbo because people who have applied their permanent residency while ago and working somewhere have to go back their country. Is this fair that after waiting for year or two on your residency application you are asked to leave the country because many numbers in your occupation? I don't think so because they think Australia is their home now and working here. Many people have sponsored by their families and now they moved here and living together and how come those people can be sent back and their families already here. It should cap onwards but people who already have lodged their applications should not be affected by this new law. Being a Australian citizen, I request you to mercy on them Please.
