

I wish to suggest that all members of parliament begin to take global warming seriously. It is time to stop the political power plays and commit to positive action. The recent fires caused by abnormally hot weather should cause to alert us of the seriousness of this problem.

Arguments about the economics of taking action are irrelevant and to delay action will cost far more not only economically, but in other costs, such as loss of life and property.

Please commit to taking this matter seriously.

Heather Hubert