

I write as a concerned citizen about the changing nature of our world climate and the decimation and lives lost as a result. The overwhelming evidence from all scientists who work in the field of climate change and the drastic impact human civilisation is having is beyond question. It is beyond time that positive and immediate action is taken to work towards a sustainable future for all of mankind. For too long the loudest voices have come from the polluters instead of the taxpayers and politicians have given the polluters priority. Australia can be an advanced, supremely profitable country if we stop taking the easy route of digging up our resources and instead put money and our intellect into a sustainable future for us all. Politicians must stop looking to the next election and have vision for this great country. Do not let our grandchildren down.
