

Respected sir/madam

This is in reply to the new migration amendment (visa cap) bill 2010 , i am in Australia from last 3 years and i love this country , in 2007 i went to a seminar organied by a australain immigration in India in which i was told about the benifits of studying in Australia and oppurtunities available for international students and a scope of getting Permanent Residency which motivated me to choose Australia as my new destination . I was doing Bachelor of accounting in India that time which i left in between and decided to take a big step of migrating to Australia for a better fortune. That time commercial cookery was in high demand so i choosed that course , when i came here i worked hard i started working part time in a restaurant and did my studies as well , it was not easy to manage job and studies together but my career was important to me and my family so i did all hard work needed in order to succeed . After completing my studies and experience required to file Permanent residency i lodged my file with immigration in 2009 it was an moment of pride for me because i actually reached very close to my goal and my career objectives of settling in Australia and to work in my field (hospitality ) in which i did study for 2 years in Sydney.

But couple of days before i came across this "migration amendment act 2010 here " which tends to change everthing which was promised in previous migration laws . If this happens it will distroy my whole career ,all my hard from last 3 years and the money which i invested will be a big waste for me and my family . My family took big loans from banks to support me and they are still repaying them back . If this new bill is bought in practice then my life will be reuined .

Its my humble request to reconsider your decisions . I will highly appreciate your co-operation in regards to this issue as it is connected to future of thousands of migrants looking ahead for bright future.

Regards
Shammi
