

To Whom It May Concern,

As a permanent residency applicant who has already spent four years studying and working here in Australia, I am writing this letter to show my great concern over the Visa Capping Bill 2010, which, if passed in Senate, will potentially bring uncertainty to the approval of my PR application.

My wife and I came to Australia four years ago as international students. We all found taxable jobs while studying in universities. In 2009, we successfully lodged PR application together, which gave us a strong belief that our life would be better and better in Australia, where we love and had already gotten used to living. However, since I heard the news on the Visa Capping Bill 2010, I felt anxious about our future. We have spent our primary time of life in Australia where we have contributed and will be committed to nation's prosperous future. Therefore, would any related authority please consider people like us and give them a chance to live in this beautiful land?

Best regards,
