

To whom it may concern,

I live in Ararat and look out to the Challicum Hills wind farm which has added to the aesthetics of the view. I have been underneath a turbine on three occasions without any physical discomfort other than that afforded by the blustery wind. I am dismayed by the reluctance of some people to support green energy, much as I am by the catastrophic weather events that seem to be becoming a constant and which I suspect are due to climate change.
