

Respected Sir/Madam,

I heard news from my friends that no one gona be permanent resident in future. All of them are scared from that decision. They really work hard day by day. One of my best friend age about 34 years left his good job in India and decided to come to Australia for good future. And his wife also left bank job and both come to Australia. All of there future plans stucked just because of permanent residency. I see them stressed every morning and talking about new P.R. rules. Now if they won't get P.R. in Australia they dont have any bright future in India even because they are getting aged day by day. I know that i can't chang the decision but i can reuset that whatever is happening is wrong. Please try to settele those who already are in this country. I was also student before when i was student at that time rules were not that strict. I got permanent residency in year 2009. Please dont spoil everybody's future.
