

The Human Rights and Anti-Discrimination Bill undermines free speech, freedom of religion, freedom of association and natural justice, some of the very freedoms upon which the Australian way of life is based.

Its proposed conciliation conferences, which would deny respondents the right to have a legal adviser, would bypass our Court system which provides justice to all parties.

Brian Brady