

Senate Committee Submission into National Labelling for Animal Products

17/11/2012

A national labelling scheme for animal-derived food products would enable consumers, through their buying power, to make factory farmers change their practices. I urge the government to develop a compulsory national labelling scheme of the method of production of all meat, eggs and dairy products. When I buy something labelled free range, I want to know it is really free range. Thank you.