

Dear Sir or Madam,

I think the Visa Capping Bill has advantages and disadvantages. I do not think the new migrate will create more job opportunities. Because they also want jobs after they graduate from University or college. I create a model or formula to test whether they can contribute to the economy of Australia. I found in the short term they can contribute to economy growth and later they cannot do the same thing. Seriously every migrate want to become wealth and Australia can provide lots of benefits to new migrants to them but it is in limited amount. So not every migrants can get same benefits. So the Visa capping bill is good. Because Australia want to give more benefits to new arrivals however it is not to everyone because they are too many migrate so it is good to cut visa applications. However Australia still need migrates but good quality in qualification, skills, morale qualities.

In short Australia can bring benefit to new limited new arrivals not everyone arrivals. To many arrivals push the property price up and create more pollution problems. In the long term it can not bring benefits to Australia. The government should decide the policy according to needs of the country not influenced by other factors.

Yours Faithfully