

In Queensland any new development proposal that will affect the environment, for example the new resort development on Great Keppel Island, is assess by the minister for state development, infrastructure and planning and not the Minister for Environment and Heritage Protection, surely that alone shows where this states priorities are. The federal government has the Minister for Sustainability, Environment, Water, Population and Communities assessing the same proposal for Great Keppel Island. Please don't let this Queensland liberal dictatorship have the final say on our precious environment because to them it is simply a commodity to be developed.

Regards,

Natalie Stanton