

Dear Senators,

Could I respectfully suggest to you that there has never been a worthwhile project that has not had very vocal protestors and windfarm is no exception. These objectors make many untrue or part true arguments to support their claims.

Whether one believes in climate change or not; coal and oil are a finite resource, so anything that can be done to extend their life should be supported, and wind energy is one of these.

There is much that could be written on the virtues of wind farms but I only wish to plead with you not to listen to these well meaning, but misguided folk who oppose this (Windfarm) industry.

Yours respectfully,

Alex H. McRae
